Air Power: Time To Act

MR. SECRETARY OF THE NAVY:

AT YOUR last press conference you said that our proposal for an all-Air Chief of Staff "revived the old question of a separate air force to which I am opposed." It certainly means a combined organization for air. What we suggested was the appointment of a separate Chief of Staff for Air Warfare wherever and however conducted except from ship deck. If that means a separate organization, well and good. This is the kind of separation which would put air on a parity with land and sea. It is the kind of separation which would insure a common outlook and efficiency in all the fighting services. Nothing less has spelled the kind of organization in the Eisenhower manner which has produced perfect teamwork in our European operations.

To be sure, General Arnold, Army Air Chief, seems to enjoy complete independence of General Marshall, Army Chief of Staff. To be sure, he is a member with Marshall, King and Leahy of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Committee. He thus has complete say over Army aviation. But he has none at all over Navy aviation, and there is no equivalent of Arnold in the Navy. The reason is that Navy lags behind Army in recognition of air power. We agree that the old-timers have come a long way in acceptance of air. But the nature of the existing Navy setup shows that air power is still thought to be an auxiliary to naval operations.

AIR POWER, however, is an independent element of warfare. The demonstration lies in smoking Hamburg, in burning Ploesti. Wouldn't the Navy give its eyeteeth to have been in a position to get through the Dardanelles and the Army to have landed at Constanza? Even in such a remote event they would have been hard put to it to take a sock at vital Ploesti. Through the air the job was done. Hamburg alone is sufficient to prove that air p[illegible] is making a mockery out of "fortress" Europe, and one day will do the same out of island Japan.

Thus air power deserves its separate setup in Washington. The lack of this setup puts air in a tug-of-war between land and sea chiefs. Competition resolves itself into duplication. And great waste of our resources is represented by overlapping of air facilities. There are duplicate airfields and air bases in such operations as coastal reconnaissance. Army and Navy air arms operate vast air transport systems covering large sections of the globe and running to the same points. Separate training commands exist which give the same instruction. At Guadalcanal there are Army squadrons, Navy squadrons, Marine Corps squadrons—all operating different types of fighter planes. They require separate supply systems, maintenance of different lines of spare parts and equipment, separate ground crews. Our bomber strength is divided.

This is the situation, Mr. Secretary, that makes for catch-as-catch-can rather than coordination. We think the Commander in Chief ought to correct it. Air power is entitled to equality in responsibility for running this war. The country itself is entitled to it.

Revenue Mill Tuning Up

Individual Excess Profit Tax Hinted by Chairman Doughton

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

House Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton last night declared for a tax bill "within the limitations of taxpayers to pay" and hinted strongly at an individual excess profits levy following conferences with the Nation's top tax spokesmen.

Doughton, it was learned, talked not only with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, charged with taxing for revenue, but with Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson, in over-all charge of anti-inflation tax policies.

This was regarded as significant, since the division of tax authority between Vinson and Morgenthau has never been clearly settled. It was assumed that both officials will have recommendations to submit to the Ways and Means Committee when it starts on a tax bill next month.

Vinson, former chairman of the Ways and Means tax subcommittee and leading draftsman of many of the Administration's early tax bills, is a close friend of Doughton, but the North Carolina Democrat made no mention of this talk with the war stabilizer in a prepared statement on his tax views.

The statement, issued on leaving the Treaury, said that he (Doughton) and Morgenthau "appear to be in agreement on most of the fundamental issues concerning the need for increased government revenue to pay a larger share of the war costs, and that with rates rising we should look for ways of protecting taxpayers whose working

Once Again

By E. C. Daniel

London, Aug. 13.—A force of British bombers so great it took hours to pass the coast droned out toward the Continent tonight apparently in the direction of northwest Germany, where flaming and desolate Hamburg still shuddered from a new attack Monday.

Hamburg has cowered under nine Allied raids in 10 days, and Hamburg police, via Stockholm dispatches, were quoted as saying 30,542 persons were dead, wounded and missing, including 8347 known dead. A Danish consular official estimated the dead at 200,000, but officials in London were skeptical of this estimate.

The Air Ministry said "a great weight of high explosives and incendiary bombs were dropped" in the last raid on Hamburg. Thirty bombers and two fighters were lost.

Damage Unparalleled

A correspondent of Aftonbladet of Stockholm quoted the Danish official as estimating that 200,000 were killed in Hamburg before last night in the most concentrated air raids in history, frankly aimed at blotting Europe's greatest port off the map. The estimate was regarded with skepticism in London, although the Air Ministry has said that virtually every part of Hamburg's 50 square miles has been pocked with sprawling ruins.

The ministry said the Battle of Hamburg was of greater intensity than the Battle of the Ruhr ever was and that the damage in the port was "unparalleled in the history of air war."

Fires set 65 hours earlier still were blazing when British and Canadian airmen released their new cargoes of bombs last night. From July 24 until last night, more than 8000 tons had been cast on the city of 1,600,000, converting it into a heap of rubble. Stockholm reports said the Nazis had ordered surviving Germans to evacuate Hamburg after the Thursday raid.

Bodies Everywhere

Stockholm dispatches from Copenhagen quoted the Danish consulate secretary, just arrived from Hamburg, as saying: "All obligations to work are suspended." This indicated that major war production, including a third of Germany's submarine output, had ceased.

Allies Twice Crack Defenses, Begin Circling Volcanic Bastion

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Aug. 3.—American and British troops have cracked the enemy's Mount Etna line at two points and tonight surged forward to draw a ring of steel around Sicily's volcanic bastion, where many German troops now face entrapment.

The crushing American attack threw back the whole German northern flank. Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr.'s Seventh Army occupied Troina yesterday, it was disclosed, and rolled on to within 40 miles of the east coast behind Catania.

Fresh American and British divisions were poured into the drive late tonight, bringing renewed energy for the final push. One American outfit which had 23 days' hard fighting, much of it at night, was withdrawn Sunday and replaced by another group, veteran of the Tunisian campaign. The British Seventy-eighth Division also entered the fray.

By breaking through along the Troina-Taormina Road on the north side of Mount Etna, the Americans threatened the German positions on the western slopes of the volcano, including those at Bronte.

Canadians from Regalbuto and the men of the British Seventy-eighth Division—the heroes of Tunisia's Long Stop Hill—from Centuripe shattered the Germans' western defenses in the Catania plain in one of the best "left hook" blows of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's career.

[Clark Lee International News Service reporter, quoted a soldier as saying that the battles near Catania were the fiercest the Eighth Army has encountered since the fall of El Alamein in Egypt. Lee reported that the Germans were blowing up ammunition dumps and bridges west of Catania, indicating they were preparing to withdraw.—Editor's note.]

Another "Cap Bon" Takes Shape

Severed by the Americans to the north and the Eighth Army to the south, a big chunk of the Nazis' Mount Etna line was left dangling. The Allied offensive which got under way Sunday achieved all its initial major objectives on time and continued to sweep on.

The shortest American route to the eastern Sicilian shore runs inland through Cesaro—virtually at the Seventh Army's fingertips—often-bombed Randazzo and Castig-

Russian Blows Send Germans Reeling at Orel

General Nazi Retreat Appears Under Way; Reds 5 Miles Away

By Edward D. Ball
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Wednesday), Aug. 4.—A general German retreat appeared to be under way today at Orel, where triphammer blows of Soviet forces carried the Russian offensive within 5 miles of the besieged city and sent the Germans reeling back with tremendous losses in men and arms both southwest and northwest of the city.

South of Orel the Russians drove into Stisi and Pilatovka, and from the east they occupied the railway station of Domnino, 7 miles from the city, Moscow announced in a special communique.

The heaviest fighting came in the muddy wheatfields northwest of Orel, where the Germans fought furiously to stave off complete encirclement. German tanks and infantry were hurled out again and again in incessant counterattacks against the advancing Red army units, the midnight communique said later.

But the Russians repelled all the Nazi blows, killing more than 2000 Germans, said the bulletin recorded by the Soviet monitor.

The Russians captured great quantities of ammunition and food, and several 60-ton Tiger tanks, indicating the Germans were retiring in haste.

The Russian air force brought down 76 German planes in yesterday's battles, the communique said.

Allies Anxious to Accept Surrender, Commons Told

By Lewis Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 3 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons in a surprise debate tonight that the Allies would be "only too ready" to adopt a "reasonable attitude" toward Italy if the Allies got what they wanted for fighting Germany.

Eden, replying to a question, said that with the departure of Benito Mussolini and the Fascist regime, Italy took on a different status.

"We are, as a war cabinet, anxious to see Italy accept the unconditional surrender she was offered and anxious to see facilities given to her so that we can turn the war even more vigorously on to Germany," he said.

"We are anxious to see a peace in which Italy can play her part as a respectable nation once again."

Answering questions which indicated fears that the Allies might deal with Italian Quislings, Eden said:

"If we accepted unconditional surrender from anyone I would not regard myself as thereby recognizing them in the least. I would be extremely pleased to accept unconditional surrender from Hitler tomorrow."

The German radio, joined by Rome, publicized a seven-point armistice proposal which it said had been submitted to Italy by President Roosevelt, but this was without confirmation from any Allied

New Deal Foe Takes Lead In Mississippi

Ex-Governor Conner Ahead in Early Results Of First 'Test' Election

By the Associated Press

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 3.—Former Gov. Martin Sennett (Mike) Conner was holding a lead tonight over three other candidates in early returns from the Mississippi Democratic gubernatorial primary. Conner is commissioner of the Southeastern Athletic Conference.

Unofficial returns from 222 of the State's 1693 precincts gave Conner 6214 votes; Thomas L. Bailey, longtime State legislator and House speaker, 3310; Lester Franklin, former chairman of the State Tax Commission, 1917; Dennis Murphree, retiring Lieutenant Governor, 3476.

[The Mississippi voting was expected to provide a test of the rumored "revolt" of the South against the New Deal. When Conner was Governor he was strongly anti-New Deal. Should he be elected again he could select his own State delegation to the Democratic National Convention next year, and reports to the Capital are that he would choose only delegates opposed to a fourth term for President Roosevelt.

[Murphree is known as a 100 per cent Administration supporter, while Bailey is listed, like Conner, as an ultra-conservative, and Franklin, who is supported by Senator Theodore Bilbo, as pro-Administration.—Editor's Note.]

It was believed that the election would fail to give any of the gubernatorial candidates a clear majority and a run-off would be necessary.

Conner was Governor from 1932-1936 and fathered the first Mississippi sales tax.

Police Launch Hunt; Feeding Instructions Sent Out Over Radio

Albany, Oreg., Aug. 3 (AP).—Mysterious disappearance of a 2-day-old girl from a hospital nursery today sent State, county and city police on a hunt for a kidnaper.

The baby was born to Mrs. W. B. Gurney, wife of the president of the A. F. R. Veneer and Plywood Workers Union, on Sunday. It was taken at 2 a. m. today from the second-floor nursery of the Albany General Hospital, Chief of Police Stellmacher said.

Tonight a radio broadcast was made on proper feeding of the lightly wrapped infant. The radioed instructions were supplied by Mrs. Gurney's physician, Dr. E. Lew Hurd. He said the baby, Judith, could survive with proper care.

The parents are not wealthy, precluding the probability that ransom was the motive. The Gurneys, parents of another 8-year-old girl, insisted they had no enemies. A nurse discovered the absence of the baby. The kidnaper apparently entered the nursery through a window, and left by a fire escape.

Lewis Appears Before WLB To Press Portal Pay Claims

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Introducing a new issue into the coal wage controversy, United Mine Worker President John L. Lewis yesterday asked the War Labor Board to approve a contract providing "portal-to-portal" pay to Illinois coal miners as a matter of fairness to men performing one of the world's most hazardous occupations—technical legal questions aside.

To board members, who had been studying the involved application of the Fair Labor Standards Act to Lewis' demands, this represented an entirely new approach.

Lewis appeared before the board for the first time in the controversy dating from March 10 to defend his agreement with Illinois operators providing for payment of $1.25 a day in settlement of portal to portal claims, plus an eighth hour of work each day at premium wages—worth $1.50—plus other concessions already ordered by WLB, worth about 25 cents a day.

Public Member Wayne L. Morse chided the miners for having failed to appear before the board previously as follows:

"This discussion has shed some new light on the case," Morse said. "This is the first time we have had the privilege of getting the union's theory of portal to portal, and it certainly has taken on some new complexions this morning. . . .

"This opens up an entirely new vista and I have taken the position, as my colleagues know, that there is a problem as to portal to portal travel time compensation as a working condition problem. . . .

"But, gentlemen, it has never been tried before this board, and

Fingerprint, Burns, Missing Shirt

Evidence in Murder of Oakes Links de Marigny to Crime

By the Associated Press

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 3.—With testimony about a fingerprint, burned hairs and a misisng shirt, the King's prosecutor attempted today to prove that it was tall, bearded Alfred De Marigny who clubbed Sir Harry Oakes to death last month and left his body aflame.

An American detective, Capt. James O. Barker of Miami declared the 35-year-old De Marigny offered three different explanations for the "considerable hair burns" Barker said were found on the former count's hands and arms.

Speaking slowly, while Magistrate F. E. Field wrote down every word in longhand, Barker presented for the first time the evidence which caused De Marigny to be arrested and charged with the murder.

If Field finds the charge justified on the basis of testimony at a preliminary hearing, De Marigny will be bound over for jury trial in October. Not until then does the defense have its inning.

De Marigny's pretty 19-year-old wife, Sir Harry's eldest daughter, heard part of Barker's recital before leaving the crowded courtroom to fly to Miami, where she said she had business in connection with her husband's defense.

Barker told how he and Capt. E. W. Melchen, also of Miami, were summoned to Nassau by plane by the Duke of Windsor, Governor of the Bahamas, an hour after Sir Harry's body was found early July 8 by Harold G. Christie, house guest at the sumptuous Oakes

CHAPTER III

Moscow Dateline

By Henry C. Cassidy

Rural Russian Scene on War's Eve

The Russian countryside was an entrancing spectacle on the eve of war, a panorama of the glib, blissful peace that all the European pretenders to neutrality enjoyed while Germany was overpowering their neighbors, only to turn next against them. Not that life in Russia was ever really blissful. The first thing that any visitor remarked in walking the streets of Moscow, was that the people never smiled. But in those days life was definitely better. The crop was good, so there was enough to eat. The Baltic States, which had been absorbed by the Soviet Union just a year before, were beginning to send in their flow of consumers' goods. And this was an island of peaceful construction, amid the wanton destruction all about of the "imperialistic war."

So I saw the Russian people at their happiest under the Soviet regime. I also saw them as they really were when I flew from Moscow to Sochi, on the Caucasian Riviera stretch of the Black Sea coast on vacation.

An antique Packard coupe awaited me, and took me in state to the Riviera Hotel. I walked up the driveway, where the vacationers looked up curiously at me from their dominoes and checkers, and went to my room.

With all the richness of the Caucasus, I had a struggle the next day trying to get a meal. Not that there wasn't anything to eat, but just that I couldn't get it when I wanted it.

I had told them I wanted breakfast in my room at 9 a. m., one piece of fruit, bread, coffee, and nothing more. The director, the reception clerk, the cook, the baggageman, and the maid had all come to see me the night before, to ask what I wanted to eat. I told them all the same thing. They all seemed surprised, but, after all, it seemed quite simple.

So when I woke up at 9 a. m., I rolled out of bed, washed and dressed, thinking breakfast would be along any minute. By 9:30, I was hungry, and there was no breakfast in sight. Luckily I had brought along a couple of apples. I ate them, smoked a cigarette, and sat on the veranda and waited. At 10:30 the maid arrived with a huge tray which she deposited on the veranda table and started unloading. There was a dish of caviar and onions, sliced and chopped, a plate of fried mushrooms and potatoes, a cucumber and radish salad, cheese, butter, cake, and a bottle of white Abrau "Riesling" wine, a Soviet copy of the Rhine wine.

"That's dinner," I protested.

"That's breakfast," said the maid.

"But I ordered fruit, bread, and coffee," I objected.

"That is coming next," the maid said, and she departed.

She came back in a few moments with a platter of brown

Yank Jungle Fighters Reach East End of Munda Air Base

By William F. Boni
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Wednesday), Aug. 4.—The east end of the Japanese air base of Munda on New Georgia Island has been reached by hard-fighting United States forces in their yard-by-yard battle against cave-entrenched enemy jungle defenders, General MacArthur announced today.

The slow progress against this key objective of the Central Solomons campaign was a part of a general advance, the second such reported in as many days. Yesterday's communique had told of advances of from 500 to 1200 yards which placed the Americans in some instances within 700 yards of the bitterly defended air strip.

Throughout the theater, Allied planes destroyed or damaged 29 barges, bringing to nearly 200 the number of such supply boats of the enemy wrecked in the last 10 days. One bomber scored a bomb hit at night on an enemy ship, believed to have been a destroyer, in Dampier Strait.

Twenty barges hit were found concentrated in Borgen Bay, Cape Glouster, New Britain. Heavy explosions set off on some of them indicated they carried ammunition. The other nine were near Finschhafen.

The communique, in announcing the 10-day toll of barges, said, "Many were undoubtedly used as troop carriers, some being 145 feet in length."

"The total destroyed was estimated as capable of transporting a division of troops if used solely for that purpose," the communique added.

"The enemy's losses both in personnel and material cannot fail to have been heavy."

Of the Munda fighting the communique said:

"Our ground forces advancing along the coast have reached the eastern end of the airfield. Further

Nazis Reported Seizing Italian Troops on Ships

Istanbul, Aug. 2 (Delayed) (AP).—The Germans seized three Italian ships loaded with Italian troops en route to Italy when they stopped in Suda Bay in Crete to refuel. (This dispatch was not confirmed from any other quarter.)

The Italians protested, but the Germans ordered the ships interned pending further developments in Italy. There were no details on where the ships came from, but the troops may have embarked from the Greek mainland or the Dodecanese Islands.

Turkey Resents 'No Asylum' Notes

London, Aug. 3 (INS).—Turkey has drafted a note "in a severe tone" rejecting the Allied governments' "no asylum for Fascists" warning to neutral nations, Reuter's news agency reported today. Turkish circles were quoted as stating the Allied notes were contrary to international law and "derogatory to Turkish sovereignty."

Fines, Prison Threatened

Labor Pirating Prosecutions Promised by District WMC

Cracking down on violations of the District's manpower stabilization regulations for the first time, James B. Burns, WMC management-labor committee chairman, yesterday warned violators they would be subject to $1000 fines, a year in prison or both, upon conviction of failure to comply with the law here.

"The provisions of the WMC employment stabilization plan will be enforced by invoking the sanctions and penalties provided for, in accordance with the President's hold-the-line executive order of last April 8," Burns said.

Violators of the provisions of the plan which involves hiring of workers from their employers at an increased wage by other employers are subject to penal provisions of the act of October 2, 1942, he explained.

"I am informed," said Burns, "that all future complaints of plan violations will be handled by the area director on the assumption that all employers and workers in the area are familiar with the plan's provisions which forbid job pirating and the movement of workers within or out of essential, or locally needed activities without statements of availability.

Until this time no attempt has been made to invoke penalties.

Burns said that on the whole compliance had been good and that the committee's reports indicated that most of the violatoins had not been deliberate.

"In recent weeks, however, there has been a tendency for violations

Clergy to Visit Russia

Copyright by Chicago Sun

London, Aug. 3.—An important British church delegation, headed by the Archbishop of York and including other distinguished clergymen, is going to visit Russia in compliance with a Soviet invitation, it was learned here today.

According to present plans, the Metropolitan Sergei, leader of the Rusian Orthodox Church, later will return the visit to Britain.

There have been occasional visits of churchmen to Russia under the Bolshevik regime, but they have been rare and the clergymen went as private tourists.

Atherton Presents Ottawa Credentials

Ottawa, Aug. 3 (AP).—Ray Atherton, new United States Minister to Canada, presented his credentials today to the Governor General, the Earl of Athlone, at Rideau Hall.

Atherton succeeded J. Pierrepont Moffat, who died last January 4. He came here from the post of acting chief of the State Department Division of European Affairs in Washington. A career diplomat, Atherton served for 14 years at the United States Embassy in London and held posts in the Orient and Europe.

Churchill Informs Commons of Plan To Use Manpower

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 3.—Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that President Roosevelt has promised to turn over to Great Britain between 150 and 200 American-constructed ships on which work already has started.

A letter which the Prime Minister read in the House explained that the process of handing over the ships would be spread over a 10-month period and that they are being delivered at a rate of 15 to 20 a month.

Churchill also disclosed the Canadian government was making similar arrangements concerning ships built in Canada.

He told Commons this would absorb the reserves of trained seafaring population and the resources of both the United States and Britain would be "economically and providentially applied to the main purpose of the war."

Churchill's statement recalled a recent Washington announcement that some ships would be placed under the British flag because of a temporary shortage of ship's crews in the United States.

Churchill said there was no financial arrangement and that the matter would be dealt with by the usual method of things being used to a common advantage.

The letter disclosed that early in the war it was decided the United States would be "the predominant cargo shipbuilding area for us both, while your country was to devote its facilities and resources principally to the construction of combat vessels."

(While this seemed to open a question as to whether Britain was building warships for the United States officials in Washington said the release of American merchant ships to Britain involves no agreement on the part of the British to turn over combat vessels. In fact, these authorities asserted, such an agreement would be beside the main point, which they described as being an effective use of available manpower. Britain's responsibility, it was said, is to get the ships manned with her surplus seafaring population as soon as possible and put them into the service of the United Nations.

(Any question of compensating the United States, authorities indicated, will be lumped with other lend-lease affairs marked for post-war settlement between the countries.)

Text of Roosevelt Message on Ships

White House, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister:

When you were with us during the latter part of December, 1941, and the first few days of 1942, after we had become active participants in the war, plans for a division of responsibility between your country and mine became generally fixed in certain understandings.

In matters of production, as well as in other matters, we agreed that mutual advantages were to be gained by concentrating, in so far as it was practical, our energies in doing those things which each of us was best qualified to do.

Here in this country in abundance were the natural resources of critical materials.

Here there had been developed a welding technique which enables us to construct standard merchant ships with a speed unequaled in the history of merchant shipping.

Here and there we had waiting cargoes to be moved in ships to your island and to other theaters. If your country was to have carried out its contemplated ship construction program it would have been necessary to move large tonnages of raw materials that we have here across the Atlantic to your mills and yards, and then, in form of finished ships, to send them back to our ports for the cargo that was waiting to be carried.

Obviously, this would have entailed a waste of materials and time.

It is only natural for us then to decide that this country was to be the predominant cargo ship building area for us both, while your country was to devote its facilities and resources principally to the construction of combat vessels.

You in your country reduced your merchant shipping program and directed your resources more particularly to other fields in which you were more favorably situated, while we became the merchant shipbuilder for the two of us, and we have built and are continuing to build a vast tonnage of cargo vessels.

Our merchant fleet has become larger and will continue to grow at a rapid rate. To man its ever increasing number of vessels we foresee present difficulties of no mean proportions. On your side the British merchant fleet has been diminished and you have in your pool as a consequence trained seamen and licensed personnel.

Clearly it would be extravagant were this body of experienced men of the sea not to be used as promptly as possible. To fail to use them would result in a wastage of manpower on your side, a wastage of manpower on our side and what is of equal importance a wastage of shipping facilities. We cannot afford this.

In order that the general understanding we reached, during the early days of our engagement together in this war, may be more perfectly carried out, and in order as a practical matter to avoid the prodigal use of manpower and shipping that would result from pursuing any other course, I am directing the War Shipping Administration, under appropriate bareboat arrangements, to number to your flag for temporary wartime duty during each of the suggested next 10 months a minimum of 15 ships.

I have furthermore suggested to them that this be increased to 20.

We have been allocating to British services on a voyage-to-voyage basis large numbers of American-controlled ships. What I am now suggesting to you, and what I am directing the War Shipping Administration to carry out, will be in the nature of a substitution to the extent of tonnage transferred for the American tonnage that has usually been employed in your war program.

Details of the arrangements we can properly leave to national shipping authorities for settlement through the combined Shipping Adjustment Board, whose function it is to concert employment of all merchant vessels, and will in accordance with its usual practice do so in connection with these particular ships.

Always Sincerely,
(Signed) Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Prof. Sturges Will Direct Aid For U. S. in Liberated Sicily

State Department Representative to Be Coordinator

By the Associated Press

Prof. Wesley A. Sturges of Yale University, former Board of Economic Warfare official, will direct American economic aid in liberated Sicily, it was learned yesterday at the State Department.

As the first area director over former enemy territory, his duties will be to coordinate the economic activities there of the State, Treasury, War and Navy Departments and the Offices of Economic Warfare, Lend-Lease Administration and Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Offices.

Sturges now is in Algiers, where he had charge of BEW affairs until that agency was supplanted by the new Office of Economic Warfare after the row between Vice President Henry Wallace, chairman of BEW, and Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

With his appointment Sturges was transferred to the State Department since he will operate under the Office of Foreign Economic Coordination, with Assistant Secretary Dean Acheson as director.

Several technical assistants, experts in Italian economic and financial affairs, are expected to be appointed later as Sturges' staff when he goes into Sicily at the invitation of AMGOT.

From AMGOT, which is now distributing relief to Sicilians, Sturges is scheduled to take over such activities as relief, the production of civilian necessities and the restoration of agriculture, housing and transportation.

Lend-lease funds will finance the program. Income from goods sold to the Sicilians will be credited to lend-lease. Procurement and development of critical materials from Sicily will be the function of OEW, while the Treasury Department has introduced a special currency for that area, a fixed monetary exchange rate of 100 lira to the dollar and is in charge of general fiscal matters.

Sturges is to coordinate all these activities, which are expected to provide a pattern for similar operations on the Italian mainland and other territories as they are liberated from the Axis powers.

Head of P.-C. A. Decries Monopoly In U. S. Aviation

Chicago, Aug. 3 (AP).—S. Bedell Monro, president of Pennsylvania-Central Airlines, told the Chicago Engineers Club today that monopoly "can only stultify American aviation."

"The time has come," he said in a prepared address, "for a sober realization of the fact that monopoly in any field and in any form can only stultify American aviation at a time when the air transport industry has demonstrated that its leadership and development under a program of regulated competition affords the Nation the highest degree of security at all times."

Monro described the recent declaration of policy by 16 major airlines as "the Magna Carta of American aviation." This program included free and open world-wide competition subject to reasonable governmental regulation.

bread, a jug of coffee, a pot of heavy cream, and a bowl of peaches and cherries.

Good as it may sound, I couldn't eat it. I drank one cup of coffee, pushed the food to the back of the table, out of the sun, and went for a walk.

Outside, the loudspeaker was already squawking the state transmission, the alternate voices of men and women announcers, the songs and speeches. I went back from the shore through a deep park, both to get away from the radio and to see the Caucasus. The mountains were there, snowpeaked in the distance, and so was the radio, following me incessantly. I walked down toward the town, past the queues waiting to take the bus or to buy milk or to get into the sports park, and then turned back. There was no trouble finding the route. I just followed the noise of the loudspeaker.

When I returned, the director and the reception clerk and the cook and the baggageman and the maid were all waiting for me. They wanted to know when I would eat again.

"At 2 o'clock," I told them as firmly as I could, "and just take away the hot plate, leave the rest of this food here. That is my lunch. Just bring the mushrooms and potatoes back hot."

They seemed puzzled, but satisfied, and went away, one by one.

I sat on the veranda and listened unwillingly to that radio, drowning out the rushing of the sea and watched the sun swing around, melting that food. When 2 p. m. arrived without the hot plate, I looked for a bell to call the maid. There was none. When 2:30 came, I surrendered and sat down to eat the cavier, jelly by now, and the cheese, liquid by now, and to drink the hot wine.

I was just starting on the fruit when the maid marched in carrying another huge platter with two steaks, fried potatoes, carrots and cucumbers.

Too Late and Too Much

"It's late and too much," I tried to object.

"It's not me, it's the chef," she said peremptorily, "eat," and she huffed away, her black skirt and white shirt flying.

I nibbled at the meat and vegetables, and then left them. The radio mercifully desisted, so I took a sunbath on the veranda, and when it grew too hot, went into the room and took a nap. At 5 p. m., the loudspeaker opened with a blast again, so I climbed off the bed, read for a while, and then the maid came in for my final food battle of the day. When and where would I eat next, she asked.

"In the restaurant," I said, "at 7 p. m.

"There is no restaurant; only a sanatorium."

"All right," I said, "in the sanatorium, or wherever you like, but only where the others succeed in getting what they want to eat."

I had been worried about a little moth hole at a strategic point in my bathing trunks, but I needn't have been, because, on the Russian Riviera, to paraphrase the old ditty about the hula-hula dance, they don't wear trunks when they go to take their dunks.

As I swam out, I could see that there was a section for women, just beyond the men's, divided by the fence on shore, but not at all in the water. There were only a few women swimming then, and all wore bathing suits. But soon a young girl walked to the water in a dressing gown, dropped it and plunged naked into the sea. On the beach several women were lying nude, sunning themselves on the benches.

The water was warm, with almost no surf, and I soon had enough, swam back to shore, climbed on a bench, and reflected on how simple and childlike the Russians could be in some matters, while so complex and mature in others.

No Sense of Indecency

There wasn't the slightest trace of consciousness of indecency about their nakedness. With or without trunks, the men swam together or played a game which consisted of throwing pebbles at the feet of anyone who lingered at the edge of the water. A few men who wore trunks at first peeled them off later. They simply preferred swimming that way, while the women seemed to prefer to wear suits.

A blonde girl in charge sitting at the door inside the enclosure bothered me a bit, but she paid no more attention to the men than she would have to animals. She wandered idly across the beach once, stopping to talk to one or two men lying face up on their benches, and proceeded to pick up a piece of paper which had been tossed on the shore. Then she strolled back and took her place again at the desk.

The midday sun was burning, and after lying in it for a while to dry, I dressed and walked back to the hotel.

By the time lunch came the food situation was obviously well in hand. Breakfast had come promptly at 9 a. m., with fruit, bread, and coffee—and only a small plate of caviar and a dish of liver as extras. For lunch they brought to my cubbyhole above the dining room a platter of chicken, rice, fried potatoes, and cucumber, which was just my size, and I succeeded in exchanging the bottles of champagne and Madeira for a glass of milk.

Thus I passed exactly one week, eating and sleeping, swimming and reading.

LaRoche to Head War Advertising Council Service

Chester J. LaRoche announced yesterday he had resigned as chairman of the board of Young & Rubicam, Inc., New York advertising agency, to devote full time to his duties as chairman of the War Advertising Council.

The council, a semiofficial agency, was organized shortly after Pearl Harbor to channel war information to the public through newspaper, radio and other advertising. Since its inception an estimated 250 million dollars worth of space and time has been devoted to the war effort.

In a statement LaRoche made an appeal to businessmen not to let the approaching political campaign interfere with their continued support of the advertising campaigns.

"These campaigns, I should like to point out," he said, "have nothing to do with politics. They weren't developed by or for Democrats, Republicans, New Dealers or Communists. They were developed by business leaders and the War Advertising Council, working with OWI officials."

LaRoche, 50, was one of the founders of the council. He recently spent several weeks, at the invitation of the Army, at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., along with other business executives, studying Army methods and operations.

Higgins Contract Off, Another On

Substitution of Metal for Wooden Planes Touches Off Senate Truman Investigation

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

An Army decision to abandon its efforts to obtain a fleet of plywood cargo-carrying planes has touched off a Senate Truman investigation into how the two factories involved will be converted to other war plane production, it was learned last night.

The plants are those of the Curtis-Wright Corp. at Louisville, Ky., and the Andrew Jackson Higgins firm at New Orleans, La. It was the second time in little more than a year that the lightning of a major Government contract cancellation had struck the Higgins firm. The Maritime Commission took away his contract to build 200 Liberty ships in July, 1942, and later he got the plane contract as a substitute.

The abandoned plane was the Curtiss Caravan, or C-76, a medium range plane for carrying loads slightly over two tons, and to be made mostly of wood. Few had been built, and Army air force officials said up to 15 of them might be accepted and used for service tests. While the amount of the contracts was not disclosed, it is understood that an outlay of around 400 million was planned, although only a fraction of that had been spent.

Metal Plane Instead.

Within a few hours of announcing the cancellation, the War Department said the metal Curtiss Commando, C-46, would be substituted in Higgins' plant, and G. W. Vaughan, Curtiss-Wright president, indicated that the same thing would be done at the Louisville plant.

Truman Committee Counsel Hugh Fulton indicated that the inquiry will be aimed at making sure the Higgins facilities are used to capacity.

The Truman Committee had already reported difficulties with the Caravan program, and in addition the House Military Affairs Committee had ordered an investigation. In its recent report on aircraft, the Truman Committee said the prototype of the C-76 had cracked up near Louisville in May because of difficulties with the tail of the plane. Until the difficulties were eliminated, the Truman report said the Louisville plant would be behind schedule and the Higgins plant would be forced to "mark time."

Members of the committee were said to feel that Higgins had done a good job in getting a plant ready to produce a plane, but was hampered by not having a plane to produce. In this connection the report pointed out that Curtiss-Wright had refrained from delivering drawings to Higgins on schedule because it did not want to furnish drawings before working difficulties with the plane had been corrected. Later many of the drawings were delivered, the report said.

Fulton said he believed the decision to cancel the plywood plane contracts was "wise" and "appropriate," adding that cancellation would be preferable and probably more economical in the long run than continued efforts to perfect the plane. He said a heavy loss would be involved in the project, but that this would be reduced if the facilities are used fully.

In the Louisville conversion, Vaughan said the plans call for keeping all present employes in their present positions and for hiring "additional thousands" of new workers "as the tempo of manufacturing on the new model increases."

Conditions Changed

In announcing the contract cancellation, the War Department pointed out that the Caravan construction program was started last year "at a time when, for military and other reasons, there was a demand for an additional number of cargo planes of a design to permit operations from small and unimproved fields.

"Scarcity of strategic materials prompted the requirement that the plane be built as far as possible of nonstrategic items.

"Aluminum production has subsequently been greatly increased and should be sufficient to meet requirements for an all-metal type of plane. On the other hand there has developed an actual shortage of the kinds of wood best adapted for such wood plane construction."

On the basis of experiments with the Caravan the Army said that "the plane would be more expensive and less efficient than those now being manufactured from metal."

Nazis and Rumanians Still Fighting Fires Started in Ploesti Oil Fields by U. S.

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, Turkey, Aug. 2 (Delayed).—Rumanian and German fire-fighting services are battling a great fire which has been raging in the entire petroleum area near Ploesti, hit Sunday by American Liberator bombers, according to the first eyewitness account reaching neutral Turkey today.

Eenemy reports to Istanbul said that 60 American parachute troops were landed in the Ploesti oil field area during the American raid and were captured.

The latest information was that seven United States Liberators participating in the raid were forced down in Turkey, while an eighth was reported to have crashed in the sea near enough to the Turkish shore for the crew to make its way to land in rubber boats. All members of the crews were interned.

The first report of the Ploesti fire came in a telephone conversation with an eyewitness who was near hysteria and obviously awed by the terrific destruction the raid had inflicted.

He said the bombers hit just about everything worth hitting in the entire mile-long oil pumping and refinery district in and around Ploesti.

The eyewitness said he saw some big bombers crash but that many more of the attacking fighters came down.

The low height at which the American airmen flew to the attack threw the ground gunners off their aim, he said.

The eyewitness said that probably the Ploesti region's efficiency as an oil producing and refining center probably had been cut by half at least.

(A communique issued in Cairo yesterday on the Ploesti raid said that "20 of the Liberators are reported to have been shot down over the target area and a number have not returned to base." More than 150 were said to have participated in the assault.)

Percy Grainger Will Play Tonight At Meridian Hill

Percy Grainger, distinguished Australian-American composer and pianist, will be heard in a recital tonight on C. C. Cappel's Chamber Music Series in Meridian Hill Park. This is the first time Grainger has appeared here in recital, although he has played many times as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra. He was to have been a guest artist at the Potomac Watergate last month, but the weather was unfavorable. This time, he wrote to Cappel, he will bring his own weather with him.

His program for tonight is as follows: Fantasia and Fugue in G minor (Bach-Liszt), Variations on "The Carmen's Whistle" (William Byrd), Handelian Rhapsody (Cyril Scott), Etudes Symphoniques (Schumann), Liebestraum No. 3 (Liszt), Paraphrase of "Waltz of the Flowers" (Chaikovski-Grainger.

Coal Dealers Told By WMC to Cut Deliveries Hard

Coal and wood dealers in labor-shortage areas, including Washington, were told by the War Manpower Commission yesterday they must reduce delivery services to the bone if they want WMC help in hiring and retaining workers.

The order, paralelling directions already given to laundries and restaurants, provided the fuel dealers may get hiring aid only if, among other things, they:

Cease delivering in lots of less than 1 ton of coal or 1 cord of wood except in emergencies, or when customers lack facilities for handling deliveries of that size.

Spy Suspect Shuns Assigned Counsel; Says 'He's German'

New York, Aug. 3 (INS).—One of Staten Island's two alleged spies doesn't approve of the counsel Federal Court assigned him "because he's German."

The lawyer selected to defend Edwin Harry de Spretter, 52-year-old professor, is former City Magistrate Charles A. Oberwager, one-time honorary president of the United German Societies.

Ernest L. Lehmitz, 57, was indicted with De Spretter on charges of conspiring to send military information to Germany.

Decision on De Spretter's request that Oberwager be supplanted was reserved until tomorrow, but Federal Judge Abruzzo commented:

"In this country we do not take a man's ancestry into account, particularly when he is a good American citizen. I can assure Judge Oberwager is."

De Spretter and Lehmitz pleaded not guilty today and were held in default of $25,000 bail each.

DO YOU KNOW THAT:

Capital Transit Company is carrying more people . . . and its Operating Revenues are greater than ever before. That is understandable. Washington has grown. To care for that growth we are operating more Street Cars and Buses . . . until the gasoline shortage, the greatest quantity of public transportation seen on the streets of this fair city.

But that is part of our war job; the home front contribution of Capital Transit's five thousand employees and its management. We prepared for more passengers by adding to our service new Street Cars and Buses. In 1940 . . . 141; 1941 . . . 245; and 1942 . . . 308 Street Cars and Buses . . . a total of 694 vehicles in three years, costing $7,302,514. The Defense Plant Corporation in 1942 also leased to us 100 Buses for which we pay a substantial rental. In 1942 alone we spent $1,459,842 for additions to Bus Garages, Car Houses, Terminals, New Tracks, Loops, etc. —all to provide better and more efficient service for the public.

Of course, Capital Transit Company's equipment is considered about the finest in the country. And we are now looking forward to delivery in the late fall on 65 more streamlined Street Cars. As for our Bus Fleet . . . it numbers more than 761 vehicles less than five years old. It cost plenty of money to put those Cars and Buses on our streets. But we have a strong sense of our present responsibilities . . . and we are looking ahead to our future ones . . . setting aside a post-war fund for improvements . . . new equipment and better service in the post-war period.

south where the desperate German offensive in the Donets Basin ceased completely without gains on the fifth day. It was the second German summer offensive to break against Soviet defenses, the first petering out at Orel last month.

A special Moscow communique, said the Red troops, in the twenty-third day of their Orel push, captured more than 50 populated places in a general advance of 4 to 6 miles.

As the battle, where hundreds of divisions pounded each other with artillery and tanks, reached a crescendo, the Germans appeared to be withdrawing from Orel along the still open highway toward Bryansk in the west. The Soviet army newspaper Red Star, quoted in Moscow dispatches, said the Russians at Orel had captured two important highways leading from Bolkhov to Orel and southwest to Karachev. The Russians were reported only a few miles from Karachev, which is 27 miles from Bryansk, a German stronghold as important as Orel.

German broadcasts admitted some Russian successes.

International Information Bureau, a German propaganda agency, said in a broadcast from Berlin that the Red army had made a "temporary breach" in "heavy and swaying battles" south of Orel in an effort to break through to Bryansk.

"In a violent counterattack German troops dislodged the Russians from two dominating heights and thus effectively nullified the breach," the broadcast said.

It added that the Germans "completely annihilated a Soviet army" in a four-day battle in the Taganrog sector bordering the Sea of Azov. This was the first mention of fighting in this sector in a long time.

Other German broadcasts, said the unseasonable rains which turned the ripening grain fields around Orel into quagmires had ceased and that the Russians were attacking again "with large masses of infantry, tanks and planes."

"Our heroically fighting troops warded off all enemy attacks and, supported by the German air force, regained in a counterattack terrain which had been lost temporarily," the German command said. It placed the most serious fighting southwest of Orel.

2 D. C. Airmen Win D. F. C. In Australia

Two D. C. area airmen were among 72 awarded Distinguished Flying Crosses at Allied headquarters in Australia, it was announced yesterday.

The men are Lieut. Charles S. Grant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Grant, 2210 R Street Northwest, and Lieut. Ray Dau, son of Mrs. Boyd Wilson, 1400 Twenty-first Street, Arlington.

At Dau's home last night it was learned that Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, air force commander in the Southwest Pacific, had notified Mrs. Wilson of her son's award and told of Dau's downing three Jap fighter planes in a fracas during which the Flying Fortress piloted by Dau had two motors shot away. The craft made a forced landing on the New Guinea coast. Dau was unhurt although two crewmen were badly wounded.

In an earlier, thrilling experience, Dau had run out of gas and been forced to land in the water off New Guinea.

It was also learned that Lieutenant Dau has recently been transferred to the intelligence section of the Fifth Air Force in the Australian area.

Lieutenant Dau is a native of Boston and was graduated from Dortmouth. Inducted into the Army on New Year's day, 1941, he received his commission and wings in August of that year.

According to word received by Lieut. Grant's parents, the award was given for "extraordinary achievement" while navigating one of a group of bombers in a flight of several thousand miles from Australia to Mindanao and return in April, 1942. Jap positions were bombed, enemy planes fought off, and a group of 38 United States airmen trapped in the Philippines were rescued.

Lieutenant Grant is a bomber navigator. Several months ago he was awarded the Army Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster for "meritorious achievement" He was graduated from St. Albans' School and Dartmouth College.

Allies Anxious to Get Italy Out of War, Eden Tells Commons

quarter. The seven points included demands which would normally be part of the terms granted Italy under unconditional surrender.

The Axis propagandists appeared to be using a strawman technique, for they at once began to raise visions of hunger and bondage which they said would be the fate of the Italian people if they accepted the so-called terms.

What "Peace Terms Ask"

A Reuters dispatch from Washington said "according to unofficial reports, Allied views on terms for Italy's surrender were conveyed to Badoglio's government through diplomatic channels some days ago."

A DNB broadcast said the peace terms were:

1. The Italian army and navy are to cease all resistance.
2. Collaboration with Germany must cease at once.
3. Italian troops in Greece, Albania, France and former Yugoslavia are to be withdrawn at once.
4—War materials must be handed over to the Allies undamaged.
5—An Anglo-American-Soviet military government will be established in Italy until the end of operations.
6—The arrest of all war criminals.
7—The release of all Allied prisoners of war on Italian soil.

Developments Dash Hopes

The following developments were seen here, however, as quashing peace hopes for the present:

1. Resumption of Allied bombings and shellings of the mainland and launching of the all-out drive in Sicily.
2. The detailed attack by the official Italian radio on the so-called Allied peace proposals which appeared aimed at convincing the people they would be no better off if they ceased fighting.
3. German broadcasts declaring that "the entire nation" now accepted Badoglio's position that the "war goes on."
4. Lack of substantial reports of further widespread peace agitation inside Italy. The Swiss radio reported that "quiet reigns now in the towns of northern Italy."

Playing German Game

This added up to a picture of Badoglio and his government still playing the German game. But the basic Italian desire to be done with the war, a smashing of Axis resistance in Sicily, fierce new air attacks, and a possible land invasion before the fall of Sicily, might well bring the peace stew to a quick boil.

A land invasion of the mainland even before Sicily is cleaned up appeared to be a possibility, particularly since the United Nations radio at Algiers yesterday warned Italians that Allied armies soon will make Italy a battlefield.

Although the seven-point "proposals" correspond roughly with the Allied demand for unconditional surrender, the Rome radio's interpretations of them went far beyond Gen. Dwight Eisenhower's broadcast terms of July 29.

Rome said the points showed the Allies meant to force Italy to "Pass over to their side." Eisenhower said, "Your men will return to their normal life."

Loss of Food Predicted

Rome said even food would be taken from the Italians to maintain Allied military operations from her soil, but Eisenhower said Allied occupation would be "mild and beneficent."

The Rome radio concluded by declaring "There are no disorders in Italy, no demonstrations, no German invasion, no attempts to disarm Italian troops."

Berlin then announced that the Palazzo Viminale, the present seat of the Italian Ministry of the Interior, had been selected as the meeting place of the new Italian cabinet, and was already Badoglio's headquarters.

(The Tokyo radio also broadcast, said a Federal Communications Commission recording, the statement that Raffaele Gariglia, new Italian Foreign Minister, will inform the Japanese Foreign Minister that "Italy will strive on in the prosecution of the tripartite alliance war of Japan, Germany and Italy.")

HE UNITED THE YANKS AND BRITISH INTO HISTORY'S TOUGHEST FIGHTING TEAM

BRILLIANT STORY of how General Dwight D. Eisenhower merged Anglo-American forces into the closest military alliance of all time. Commanding three topflight British officers who outranked him, he pooled resources . . . squashed friction . . . used tact and toughness to fuse the forces of two proud and jealous allies into a single smashing unit.

You'll learn from this on-the-spot report why Eisenhower was the man for the crucial job. How he won the unqualified confidence of his British associates. How the job he did paid off in Tunisia as it is paying off today in Italy. Why Hitler will live to regret that General "Ike" ever came out of America's Middle West. "Must" reading for Americans.

Synthetic Fuel Plan Called for by Ickes

War Discussed

Five Senators Are Received By George VI

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 3.—Five visiting United States Senators were received in audience by King George VI today after they had been entertained at luncheon by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

The King talked with Senators Richard B. Russell (Democrat) of Georgia; James M. Mead (Democrat) of New York; Albert B. Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky; Ralph O. Brewster (Republican) of Maine, and Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., (Republican) of Massachusetts for a long time about the general war situation.

At the luncheon with Eden, other special guests included United States Ambassador John G. Winant, Capt. Oliver Lyttelton, Production Minister; Minister of Information Brendan Bracken; R. A. Butler, president of the board of education; Maj. Gwilym Lloyd George, Minister of Fuel, Light and Power, and Air Marshal Sir Frederick Bowhill, commander of the British Air Transport Service.

United States Army headquarters have assigned personal friends of the Senators to act as military aides during the visit.

Senator Russell received his brother-in-law, Lieut. Col. J. C. Stacy of 2204 Cathedral Avenue, Washington, D. C., while Capt. Ralph Ingersoll, former editor of the New York newspaper, PM, was appointed aide to Mead.

Chandler has Capt. Stanley Bach of Lexington, N. Y., who played baseball with the Cincinnati Reds and now manages the 14 Army baseball leagues in the European theater of operations.

Capt. N. T. Bartlett, who was aide to the Harriman lend-lease missions to Britain, serves Brewster, and Lieut. William Reardon, Boston attorney, was assigned to Lodge.

Varied Witnesses Warn of Diminishing U. S. Oil Supplies

Petroleum Administrator Harold Ickes yesterday called for launching "without delay" of a synthetic fuel program, as witness after witness told a Senate committee that United States oil supplies are rapidly diminishing.

Ickes himself testified that the United States has only 14 to 15 years' known petroleum reserves, while other spokesmen from Government and private industry told of the war's heavy drain on existing supplies and generally backed demands for a synthetic program.

The petroleum administrator led a parade of witnesses in support of a bill by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming to authorize the Government to construct demonstration plants to extract gasoline from oil shale and coal on a commercial scale.

Lesson From Hitler

Urging America to take one lesson from Adolf Hitler (he said Germany overran Europe with synthetic gas and now may be producing two billion gallons a year from coal), Ickes declared this Nation could not long survive a famine in liquid fuels.

"To insure continued success in the prosecution of a long war and in the maintenance of a strong Nation thereafter, we must acquire the 'know how' on synthetic liquid fuels," the Petroleum Administrator testified.

Highlights of other testimony hinting vast military demands on this continent for oil, and the need for bulwarking supplies by synthetic processes for future security:

1. Brig. Gen. W. E. R. Covell of the quartermaster general's fuels and lubricants division, disclosed that over half of the supplies shipped to our Army overseas, and in the case of North Africa, 65 per cent, are made up of petroleum products.

2. Deputy Petroleum Administrator Ralph K. Davies, said that even if there were adequate transportation, the United States would not today have enough oil to supply unlimited civilian needs in addition to military requirements. Davies said it would be "dangerous" to delay a synthetic program.

3. Dr. R. R. Sayers, director of the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines, estimated that a flight of 1000 bombers every night for a month over Hamburg and Berlin consumes a gasoline equivalent to complete stoppage for a day of every one of the 30 million or so automobiles, buses and trucks in the United States.

4. J. T. Duce, of the Petroleum Administration's war division, told of vast untapped oil resources in Russia, Arabia and other regions. Asked by O'Mahoney why Arabian oil is not now being used to "relieve the strain" on the United States, Duce said much oil exploration work is now being done there, but necessary steel supplies are lacking.

Calls Coal Least Efficient

Robert P. Russell, executive vice president of the Standard Oil Development Co., who has directed research by the company in both the hydrogenation and Fisher processes of producing synthetic gasoline, suggested that use of coal was the least efficient and most expensive of the synthetic processes.

"It has been my own belief that if crude supplies should dwindle to a critical minimum, the next major sources of petroleum products would probably be natural gas, tar sands and oil shale," said Russell. He estimated that if domestic petroleum reserves should be exhausted by 1960, use of natural gas, oil shale and tar sands could meet needs through the year 2000 before using coal.

Ickes, first witness before the committee, testified that the Nation's coal resources have barely been scratched, that about three trillion tons is still left in the ground—enough coal to provide 1½ billion gallons of synthetic liquid fuel each year for 1000 years "and still have enough coal to use for all other present-day purposes."

Ickes said oil shale deposits, principally in the Rocky Mountain States, are estimated to contain 92 billion barrels of crude oil—a 65 years' supply.

W. Jett Lauck, United Mine Workers economist, told the committee the U.M.W. "welcomed" the O'Mahoney legislation and believed it would "undoubtedly" open opportunities for more employment in the coal fields.

Mrs. M. C. Foote, Native of Capital, Dies in New York

Mrs. Morris C. Foote, native Washingtonian who made her home for many years at 314 C Street Northwest and widow of Brig. Gen. Morris C. Foote, died at Tannersville, N. Y., yesterday, according to word received by J. W. Murphy, official United States Senate reporter.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Murphy. Her father was official chief United States Senate reporter for many years until 1896, when he died.

Two surviving sons, Col. William Cooper Foote and Capt. Francis E. Foote, were with her, having flown from distant military points. She had been visiting in Tannersville for the summer and in recent years made her home in New York. Interment will be in Arlington Cemetery. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Bomb Record Made in July Raids on Axis

London (Wednesday), Aug. 4 (AP).—American and R. A. F. bombers thundered down 21,520 tons of high explosives on Hitler-dominated Europe during July—more than 53 times as much as the Germans ever dropped on a British city in a "blitz" raid.

The greatest air offensive of the war made Hamburg its major target, 7840 tons being dropped on that battered seaport.

These figures, given today in an Air Ministry review, did not include the thousands of tons of bombs dropped on the Mediterranean underbelly of Europe by Allied air forces based in Africa. Nor did it include the tonnage dropped by R. A. F. and American medium and fighter bombers in daylight forays across the Channel. Tonnage totals in these raids were not released.

During the same period of July, Allied aircraft maintained better than a two-to-one advantage over the Axis air forces in aircraft losses, shooting down 1202 over Europe, England, Malta, North Africa and the Middle East for the loss of 596.

Major targets in the bombing assault from Britain included Cologne twice, Gelsenkirchen, Aachen, Essen and Remscheid, all in the Ruhr.

Italy was attacked four times by planes from Britain.

The heavy attacks forced the Ruhr drastically to reorganize its defense services, the Air Ministry said.

Five hundred of the Axis planes destroyed fell to United States heavy bombers and Thunderbolts based in Britain, while 108 Flying Fortresses failed to return from raids.

The North African Allied air forces shot down 496 Axis planes for the loss of 190.

2 U-Boats Sunk in 3-Day Battle

By E. B. Sullivan
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 3.—Britain and the United States demonstrated their mounting edge in the Battle of the Atlantic tonight with announcements that British warships and planes had defeated a major U-boat attack on a big Allied convoy by sinking at least two undersea craft.

A joint Admiralty-Air Ministry communique revealed the details of a savage three-day battle between a German wolf pack of 25 to 30 submarines and British warships and planes of the coastal command in the North Atlantic. A former American Coast Guard cutter now in British service took a major part in the successful fight to protect a big convoy.

Three-Day Attack

Destroyers, frigates and corvettes joined with Liberators, Flying Fortresses and Sunderlands operating hundreds of miles from their bases to smash the U-boat assault.

The wolk pack, dispersed over many miles of the convoy's course, was first sighted just before dawn after several days of fog by Liberators of the Coastal Command. The Liberators attacked one of three Nazi submarines on the surface sinking it while surface craft sped to the spot in answer to radio warnings.

For the next three days the escorting planes and ships attacked the U-boats in twos and threes continuously—usually many miles from the convoy itself. So successful were their efforts at the end of the 27 hours of fighting no submarine had gotten close enough to the merchant ships to launch a torpedo, although some of the escort were attacked.

"Luxury" Ship Winner

The H. M. S. Sennen, formerly the United States Coast Guard cutter Champlain, was credited with one of the U-boat kills. The Sennen, which the Admiralty described as "one of the most luxuriously appointed warships afloat," with H. M. S. Jed attacked two submarines and sank at least one of them. In contrast to the spartan fixtures of the British-built warships the Sennen has electric refrigerators, an ice cream freezer, a bread-making machine, and an electric laundry. The Admiralty announcement noted that it "even had an electric deck polisher."

The submarines lost contact with the big eastbound convoy after the three days fighting and the ships reached their destination safely.

The usually conservative Admiralty remarked that the successful battle was an "outstanding achievement because the enemy force had been built up over a period for the purpose of launching a major attack."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

ONE AMUSING sidelight on Congress was its sudden loss of interest in legislation broadening the powers of the War Food Administrator, the minute Judge Marvin Jones, then ex-colleague, was named to the job.

Farm blocers in both houses were clamoring for action on legislation giving the food administrator supervisory authority over prices as well as the production and distribution of farm commodities. This was while Chester Davis, secretly in league wih farm bloc efforts to rig price ceilings at inflationary levels, still held the job.

Representative Hampton P. Fulmer of South Carolina, chairman of the Agriculture Committee, had the stage all set for the bill enlarging Davis' powers. He even announced, after unsuccessful efforts to get White House approval, that he was going before the Rules Committee and demand a "rule" to bring his measure to the House floor.

Events at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue, however, caused Fulmer to drop his bill like a hot potato. The President abruptly fired Davis and replaced him with Jones.

Jones was Fulmer's predecessor as chairman of the Agriculture Committee, and everyone in Congress knew he was a tough hombre. So the last thing the farm bloc wanted was for Jones, a stalwart supporter of the President's anti-inflation policies, to have the powers which had been tailor-made for Davis in the Fulmer bill.

Also, there may have been a personal motive in Fulmer's case. Friends say he never has quite forgiven Jones for holding on to the Agriculture Committee chairmanship for six months after his appointment to the Court of Claims in 1940.

Fulmer withdrew his request for a Rules Committee hearing and hied himself to Myrtle Beach, S. C., for a summer vacation a week before Congress recessed. To Capitol newsmen, he ducked comment on his about-face, but said frankly to colleagues: "What's the use of pressing for action on my bill now?"

Marine Maverick

Maury Maverick, the fighting Texan, has waged a lot of battles in his life, including one at the Argonne in 1918, when part of his shoulder was shot away and he was decorated for gallantry. But one battle he still fights is that of the First Division vs. the U. S. Marines.

Maury was a first lieutenant in the Twenty-eighth Infantry in the Argonne, and he says (with Texas poetic license):

"The U. S. Army had a million men fighting in France. The Marines had about 5000. But to hear a Marine talk you would think they did all the fighting and won the war."

Life has become especially tough in the Maverick household in this war, because Maury Maverick, jr., has become a Marine. Writing back from the Solomon Islands recently, young Maverick boasted to his father:

"I'm a first lieutenant now, Dad, and I outrank you. You were a first lieutenant, but you were only in the Army. I'm a Marine!"

Ambassadorial Suppression

Spanish Ambassador Juan Cardenas has now outdistanced Mussolini's former puppet, Ambassador de Martino, in trying to suppress American freedom of speech and press. Martino persuaded Herbert Hoover to court-martial Gen. Smedley Butler for telling how Mussolini ran over a child without turning back—though later the court-martial backfired and Hoover dropped it like a hot potato.

Franco's Ambassador Cardenas, however, has now distinguished himself by trying to suppress the movie "For Whom the Bell Tolls"; the book "Appeasement's Child," a scathing criticism of Franco by Lieut. Tom Hamilton; and also the speech of his ambassadorial colleague from Mexico who implied that Franco is a traitor and a puppet.

The Diplomatic Corps is wondering whether Ambassador Cardenas will now demand suppression of Allan Chase's fighting book "Falange: The Axis Secret Army in the Americas." They think that this time he won't have the nerve to do it.

Merry-Go-Round

OUT in Leo Crowley's home town, his neighbor Bill Evjue, editor of the Madison, Wis., Capitol Times, is saying: "Leo Crowley has led a charmed life in politics . . . but his immunity to public criticism is at an end." Neighbor Evjue has raised some questions which have puzzled a lot of people—concerning Crowley's $75,000 salary from Standard Gas & Electric while holding down three important jobs for Uncle Sam . . . Wonder if the Wright Aeronautical advertisement trying to refute Truman Committee charges of faulty engines will be deducted from income taxes. If so, the Government will virtually pay for the ads . . . Henry Ickes, cousin of the Secretary of Interior, is waging a relentless campaign to educate the American public on the pronunciation of this valiant name. In case you didn't know it is ICK-es not Ick-EES . . . How worried Pan American Airways is over prospects of losing its onetime monopoly of all foreign U. S. airlines is indicated by the fact that it secretly offered to give 49 per cent of its stock to the United States Government. Then, with the other 51 per cent, Pan-Am would control all U. S.-foreign airlines . . . Henry Wallace privately intimates to friends that he has now found the Fifth Freedom: "Freedom from Responsibility without Authority."

Admiral Hoover Gets New Sea Post

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Aug. 3 (AP).—Vice Admiral John H. Hoover, United States representative in the negotiations which resulted in Admiral Georges Robert turning over his Martinique authority to the Allies, is being detached from his duties as commander of the Caribbean Sea frontier for a new post at sea.

Tenth Naval District headquarters announced this today, but did not disclose Hoover's new command nor his successor's name.

American Woman of 80 Broadcasting for Japs

The Office of War Information said yesterday that an 80-year-old American woman, Mrs. Henry Topping, who has lived in Japan for many years, has become a Japanese radio propagandist.

For several weeks, OWI reported, Mrs. Topping has been making an English language broadcast to the United States called "The Women's Hour."

(At Boulder, Colo., the Rev. Willard Topping whose mother, Mrs. Henry Topping, is in Japan, said yesterday he had listened to broadcasts from Japan attributed to Mrs. Henry Topping, but that the voice was not that of his 80-year-old mother. The voice, he said, is too young to be his mother's.

(The Rev. Mr. Topping said he had received no word from his mother in several months. He has been a Japanese language instructor for the Navy a year and a half.)

The Tokyo radio, in an announcement preceding each broadcast, has said that Mrs. Topping and her husband came to Japan in 1895 and "gave nearly 50 years to education and social services."

The Toppings were missionaries for many years, according to information gathered by OWI, and retired about 10 years ago to spend the rest of their lives in Japan. Dr. Topping died last August at the age of 86.

OWI said its information indicated that the Toppings declined an opportunity to return to this country. Mrs. Topping was described as "an extreme pacifist" and she and her husband were said to have been widely known among Americans living in Japan.

Tokyo radio also is sending out propaganda broadcasts by a "Miss Frances Hopkins," described as an American woman resident in Japan for years, but Government officials have been unable so far to identify her, according to OWI.

"Light of the East"

The Hopkins program, also an English language weekly feature, is called "The Light of the East."

Mrs. Topping's broadcasts are directed to American women. OWI quoted one of her recent broadcasts thus:

"Can you tell me why the women of America should send their sons, their husbands, their brothers to die miserably in an African desert or in the swamps of the South Pacific Islands, or in the shark-infested waters around these islands?"

"Miss Hopkins" began broadcasting in August, 1942. OWI said she has devoted considerable time to complimenting the Japanese people and telling how "peace-loving they are and all about the lovely flowers they grow."

Draft Fathers Move Called Effort to Force Millions Into Essential Work

By Bert Andrews
New York Herald Tribune Staff Writer

The real meaning of the "draft fathers" statement issued Monday by the War Manpower Commission became clearer yesterday as the result of many new developments, and all the evidence indicated that the move is perhaps more of an effort to force millions of fathers into essential war jobs than it is an attempt to put any vast number of them into uniform.

As part of this effort, which stems directly from a White House decision, a new and revised list of "essential" and "critically essential" occupations will be issued soon by the WMC, with the chances believed to be fairly good that most draft-age fathers who hurry into "critically" essential" jobs will win exemption from military service.

The story which was generally accepted yesterday in Washington was that the newest episode in the confused picture surrounding the drafting of fathers had its inception at a conference held last Thursday between President Roosevelt, Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the WMC, and Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board.

According to this story, President Roosevelt told Nelson something would have to be done to check the drop in the production of war material. "In New York yesterday Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the Army Service Forces, noted that only two-fifths of the production program scheduled for 1943 was fulfilled during the first half of the year.)

Nelson reportedly countered with the argument that nothing much could be done unless the drafting of men in essential industry was stopped, and that he thought that sort of put the problem up to McNutt. McNutt is said to have replied that Selective Service was forced to take non-fathers from essential industry since it could not take fathers from non-essential industry. And the final decision, it is understood, was that some 6,559,000 fathers in non-deferrable occupations would be told that, beginning October 1, they'd either have to get into the war or into war work.

McNutt Ruling Stirs Criticism at Capitol

By the Associated Press

Congressional comment indicated yesterday that legislators may take issue with Manpow : Commissioner Paul V. McNutt's decision that when pre-Pearl Harbor fathers are drafted after October 1 no consideration shall be given to whether they have one, two, three or more children.

Representative Sabath (Democrat) of Illinois, staunch Administration supporter, declared he opposed drafting "fathers of two or more children," and Representative Gossett (Democrat) of Texas issued a statement saying "the vast majority of the people in the country" disagree with McNutt's position in regard to children and dependency.

Gossett said the order was contrary "to the will of Congress as expressed in the Kilday bill." This measure by Representative Kilday (Democrat) of Texas was approved by the House on April 12, but the Senate had not acted.

It directed that no fathers be drafted until lists of all single men within a State had been exhausted, and that the fathers of only one child should be taken before fathers of two, fathers of two before fathers of three, etc.

Pending in Congress now is a measure which would increase allowances to dependents of fathers serving in the armed forces. This would keep the basic allowance to a wife at $50 a month, but would raise the payment for the first dependent child from $12 to $18 a month and for each additional child from $10 to $11.

There'll always be a U.S.A. and places you long to drive to!

Just as sure as Victory comes you'll long to ease this war strain by going places... wondrous Yellowstone again... sea-swept Cape Cod... the vivid Southwest... even Alaska perhaps. Your boy... your hero out of Africa or Iceland—or cloudland—can take spells at the wheel with you. The mileage your car is kept from making now, it can make then—but not if today's restricted mileage and speed sacrifice your engine to acid!

Acid that's greedy for metal is left over after combustion ceases in any engine. When you used to start often, and make long runs, thoroughly heating the engine, the acid mostly took leave. It wasn't the steady danger that it is today, with car usage restricted. But you can tame rampant acid by OIL-PLATING your little-used engine with Conoco Nth motor oil. Patented Conoco Nth brings your engine this oil's "magnet-like" effect—created synthetically. And that's how OIL-PLATING is held close against steepest inner engine surfaces, much like any good anti-corrosive plating... not all promptly draining down to the crankcase... not leaving fine surfaces all unfortified... hence not allowing free play to acid.

New engine parts—new cars, too—would still be scarce if the Axis folded this minute. Do your best to assure today's vital trips as well as tomorrow's richly-earned tour, by OIL-PLATING your engine now. Get Conoco Nth at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Continental Oil Company

Germans Face Trap on Mt. Etna After Allies Twice Crack Lines

The Americans also swept triumphantly onward along the steep bluffs of the north coast, and the Germans were expected to withdraw toward San Fratello.

The smashing strategic success achieved this week by Allied arms was shaping up literally into another "Cap Bon" disaster for the outflanked, outpowered, outsmarted German corps of three divisions plus several battalions of paratroops.

Defending the collapsing bridgehead became a nightmare to the German command which, following the pattern of the North African campaign, had stationed an Italian division in the most exposed section of the line. This division, the Italian Twenty-sixth Field Division, was on the western approaches to Mount Etna.

Each side of the line wrested by the Americans cut down the Germans' chances of escaping to the narrow Straits of Messina from the southern Mount Etna entrenchments, where they were pinned down by the fury of the British assault.

The attacks launched by Patton and Montgomery were classic in their sage simplicity. They knocked the weakest props from under the natural fortress chosen by the enemy as the site for a long siege battle, and this fortress—a triangular mountainous neck of land some 60 miles long and 50 miles wide at its widest point—appeared to be tumbling to the dust.

Screaming dive bombings by the American invaders smothered enemy batteries resisting the Seventh Army's drive, and American and British air fleets laid a carpet of flaming explosives along the road to victory ahead of Patton's grimly determined legions.

Their air power knocked out, their 2-mile waterway between Messina and the mainland's safety under the menace of Allied Naval guns, the Germans now faced the last phase of Eisenhower's battle of annihilation.

Much slugging fighting and more bayonet charges remained before the Allied conquerors could call their campaign complete, but all the odds were with them.

(The Algiers radio said "the victorious end of the Sicilian Battle is in sight," adding that the Allied pressure against the Catania line and along the road leading to Messina "is being kept up in spite of stubborn German resistance.")

Night flying R. A. F. Wellingtons loosed blockbusters and incendiaries upon the railway targets of Naples Sunday night, Allied headquarters announced, and another raid was made upon the port of Reggio Calabria. These thrusts at the mainland were part of the Allied strategy to force Italy to bow.

Adrano and Randazzo, enemy strongpoints at the base of Mount Etna, the reinforcement ports of Messina and Milazzo, and Axis gun positions and supply lines were hammered hour after hour.

Fighting through rough and often roadless country, the ground troops were officially reported to have slain many Germans, and the eastward push presented the picture of a series of sawtoothed advances.

In addition to the operations over Italy and Sicily, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's air forces ranged far across Mediterranean waters to interfere with Axis sea communications.

R. A. F. Beaufighters, which are blanketing the Tyrrhenian Sea almost to the coast of France, shot up a destroyer and three motorboats off the Sardinian Port of Cagliari.

The R. A. F. crewmen also reported that an explosion for which they were not responsible blew up an enemy tanker just as they were swinging to attack her. (The fatal blast might have been caused by a torpedo from some Allied submarine hunting in the same waters.)

The headquarters communique said that during attacks on enemy shipping off the west coast of Greece "one small vessel was left in a sinking condition and another in flames."

Reporter Sees Land Mines Kill Several

By Clark Lee
International News Service Staff Writer

With the American Forces at San Stefano, Sicily, July 31 (Delayed). The honor of occupying the important railroad town of San Stefano on Sicily's northern coast went to the unit led by Lieut. Col. Irving C. O. Schaefer of Montrose, Colo., which marched over back-breaking mountains for five days and nights.

Schaefer's unit served as the inland edge of an American pincers against San Stefano. The colonel himself makes a habit of capturing towns—he was the first to reach Comiso and Caltanissetta in the earlier stages of the American sweep through Sicily.

Schaefer simply walked into San Stefano, inquired the way to the headquarters of the Italian Carbinieri, then sent for a barber, sat down and had his hair cut. He found one American already in the town, a lieutenant named Lewis, who took a different route, but both of them came in "the hard way," Schaefer said.

Lewis had driven up the beach before San Stefano and got out of his command car to consult his map when the driver unexpectedly went ahead a few yards, hit a mine and was killed. The car was demolished. Lewis walked the rest of the way.

The Germans didn't put up a fight for San Stefano, but they left plenty of devilish land mines behind them. Five men were killed within the sight of your correspondent and more than half a dozen others were wounded.

The only Germans in sight were dead Germans. Their corpses were scattered along the route of retreat. We had expected the Nazis to make a stand on a ridge overlooking the quarter-mile wide, boulder-strewn bed of the San Stefano River.

Midwest Gas Cut Opposed By Governors

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Aug. 3.—Two Midwestern Governors voiced strong opposition today to a cut in Midwest gasoline rations, if the purpose is solely to permit pleasure driving in the East.

Governors, or their representatives, from seven States appeared before a special Senate committee hearing on the Midwest gasoline supply. The representatives made it clear at the outset that they would accept any sacrifices necessary to aid the Army and Navy.

Gov. Andrew Schoeppel of Kansas, chairman of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, condemned what he called confusing statements from Washington, urged a crude price increase to stimulate production and then wound up by demanding "equality in freight rates."

Arkansas Objects

"We in my home State object to any further rationing of gasoline," Gov. Homer Adkins of Arkansas said, "unless it can be shown that by doing so it will be of some benefit to the Army and Navy."

Adkins contended the basic trouble is the price of crude oil.

"If the PAW (Petroleum Administrator for War) and OPA would get together and increase the price of oil," he said, "it would encourage wildcatting, exploration and the stripper wells to greater production."

Senator Clyde M. Reed (Republican) of Kansas suggested that the Governors form a committee to resist any unnecessary curtailment of gasoline rations in the Middle West.

Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat) of Missouri is chairman of the committee. Senator Kenneth Wherry (Republican) of Nebraska also helped conduct the hearing.

Other States Protest

"We feel," said E. B. Haedke, representing the Governor of Minnesota, "that if the production of sweet potatoes in New Jersey can't be transported to Minnesota, we won't ask the people of New Jersey to curtail their production."

John A. Ainley, representing Governor Dwight Griswold of Nebraska, produced a map showing that the Midwest had seven times more area than the North Atlantic States, with the same number of residents and cars.

He said "so-called equal rationing" would mean that the East would receive 142 gallons per square mile per week of basic gasoline while the Middle West would receive 24 gallons.

"I suggest they double or treble our rations," he asserted, "because some of our farmers live 35 to 40 miles from the nearest church, high school or shopping centers."

Prices Will Be Rolled Back, Bowles Tells OPA Officials

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Confidence that prices can and will be rolled back to the levels of September 15, 1942, was expressed by OPA General Manager Chester Bowles yesterday at a special mass meeting open only to the agency's price policy officials.

"I frankly would not have come here if I thought this could not be done," declared Bowles at the "pep" rally which ended with prolonged applause for the new OPA chief who has been on the job here one week.

Bowles disclosed as "good news" the generally unannounced fact that OPA will not be forced to sweep out all so-called professors and economists from its payroll.

Only Higher-Ups Affected

Bowles revealed that Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown had obtained a ruling from Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren that Congress wished to oust professors and economists without business experience from price policy jobs only on the level of division head, regional director and district director.

This, he said, will mean about five or six persons in Washington who will be supplanted by businessmen already on their way into the agency. He did not state what the effect would be outside of Washington, but OPA officials pointed out that many of the men in the field may have had business as well as "college" experience.

Already discussed as candidate for the top price job, but not commented upon by Bowles in his address, is James F. Brownlee, former businessman now with the War Food Administration. He is expected to get the post held by Dr. J. Kenneth Galbraith, Princeton professor, who was "sacrificed" during the heat of congressional criticism against OPA.

Predicts Results in 3 Months

Citing June as OPA's "lowest point," Bowles promised to bring about "results" in about three months, adding that already labor is behind OPA and industry is falling into line rapidly. Hitherto, he revealed, industry had the attitude that price regulations should be imposed on everybody but itself.

Likewise, he said, a great task ahead is to get the general public behind OPA. He said he proposed to do this by having OPA neither carry a "chip on its shoulder or make any further attempts to win friends and influence people."

"We're going to do a job, and those who refuse to abide by the rules will be hit and hit hard," he declared.

Bowles refused to accept "all the kicks against OPA for failures to stem inflation." He said other war agencies must carry out some of the responsibilities of stopping inflation under the general anti-inflation directive handed down by President Roosevelt.

Morale-Building Objective

The special rally followed a series of similar but smaller meetings with regional personnel last week. Bowles was said to have undertaken the "personal approach" because of the obviously low morale in the agency—so low that officials have expressed concern over the increasing number of resignations in all levels.

In taking cognizance of this, Bowles said:

"We've got to get our chins up and realize that we've done a big job and must keep on doing better. Inside of a few months, we'll see a big change."

Youth Burned in Boston Fire Now Well on Way to Recovery

Boston, Aug. 3 (AP).—Eight months after losing 45 per cent of his skin in the Cocoanut Grove fire, Clifford A. Johnson, 22, member of the Coast Guard from Sumner, Mo., was well on the way to recovery tonight.

His recovery consisted largely of lying quietly in bed at the Boston City Hospital, growing himself a new skin from dime-sized patches of whole skin grafted from unburned parts of his body to the skinless areas.

His story, like those of the hundreds of others less seriously burned in the fire which cost nearly 500 lives, is a story of courage and patience through long months in a hospital bed.

But he is recovering, and in a couple more months will be able to leave for his farm home in Missouri.

From a medical angle, doctors say, Johnson was so terribly burned that he had practically no chance for survival.

Besides the 45 per cent of his skin which had third-degree burns—searing so deeply and so completely that not a skin cell remained to start the growth of new skin—Johnson had ten per cent more of his skin burned in the second degree.

During the months of confinement, his weight dropped from a husky 168 pounds down to a little more than 100, and he grew so weak two months after the fire last November 28 that he almost died.

His recovery was due to the work of a team of physicians and specialists, with Dr. Herbert C. Lund in charge of his case.

"We learned more from him about the treatment of burns than has ever been learned from any other single patient," Dr. Lund said today.

"We tried a number of things on him—plasma transfusions and other injections. For a time we had the problem of getting enough food into him to keep him alive, and solved it by giving him intravenous injections and other forms of artificial feeding.

"So much was learned by treating Johnson, that five manuscripts have already been accepted by medical publications, and there are six other manuscripts in various stages of preparation.

"Johnson was a farm boy—a husky, or he never would have survived.

"Then his family was here for a long time—the Red Cross arranged to bring them here and keep them for a while, and that did him a lot of good."

Survivors Tell Of Convoy Attack

Miami, Fla., Aug. 3 (AP).—Survivors of a torpedoed American merchant vessel told of a submarine attack on a convoy on a dark night early in July in the South Atlantic.

Ben Cockrell of Long Beach, Calif., able seaman aboard the vessel, reported nobody saw any U-boats.

Twenty-one of the 69 men aboard Cockrell's vessel are known to have been rescued.

"We had discharged our cargo and had just about completed a six-month trip around the world," Cockrell said. "We were expecting to reach home in three weeks."

No More Frills

We cannot escape a feeling that the War Manpower Commission is living in a dream world of its own creation. It has ordered restaurants to "simplify menus" and to eliminate all frills, including "finger bowls, cloth tablecloths and napkins, service plates, separate vegetable dishes and other refinements." From here on, it says, "Guests, too, will be expected to assume much of the labor wherever possible, such as pouring their own drinking water and serving themselves cold dishes from buffets." The edict so startled us that our paper napkin dropped right out of our lap. We should have endeavored to restore our composure by pouring ourselves a glass of water, had it not been for the fact that in our particular restaurant the serving of even a pitcher of water was long ago abandoned as far too frilly.

A lump welled up in our throat over the WMC's reference to us as a "guest." It is so long since any restaurant looked upon us as anything other than a trespasser or intruder that the quaint phrasing employed by the WMC evoked in us a nostalgia for the dear, dead days when we sometimes even thought of ourselves as a "patron." The restaurants disciplined us long before the WMC ever thought of doing so. Why, for months we have not had the temerity to ask for a separate vegetable dish. We considered ourselves very lucky indeed if any restaurant allowed us a separate vegetable.

It may be, of course, that the members of the WMC have access to high life beyond our ken. We suspect, however, that they have simply been having their victuals sent in to their comfortable ivory tower. Palpably, they know naught of the rigors of getting a table, let alone service, in any public eating place. No more attendants who give personal service, declares the WMC forsooth! In the favorite words of our waiter, "Don't they know there's a war going on?"

Draft Age

Senator Taft has presented some persuasive reasons in support of his contention that the Selective Service System should separate men over 30 years of age and those younger into different draft classifications. The younger men, he says, make better soldiers and are less likely to have achieved responsible or key positions in civilian life; they are also less likely to have become accustomed to expensive living standards from which the readjustment to Army pay on the part of their families would be extremely difficult; and finally their wives are more likely to have parents able to support them.

Of all these arguments, the most impressive is that the younger men make better soldiers. Experience has shown that men over 30 are doubtful assets in the Army's ranks. Most of them have lost the resilience and stamina of youth and find it extremely difficult to meet the physical requirements of military life. They are naturally, moreover, less amenable to discipline than their juniors. Having risen in civilian life to positions of relative responsibility and authority, they find it hard to take orders from officers who may be younger than themselves. And it is especially true of older men who are married that the transfer to an Army regime from the pattern of family relations they previously enjoyed is irksome and disconcerting. The fact is that the men over 30 now in uniform constitute a morale problem for the Army.

At present the Selective Service System makes no distinction as to age within the 20-year span, 18 to 38. What Senator Taft proposes, of course, is not that men over 30 be wholly exempted from military service, but merely that they be deferred until the pool of younger men is drained and until the older men are genuinely needed. He urges, in other words, a higher degree of selectivity than is now exercised in determining the order of induction. There does not appear to be anything in this proposal to hamper expansion of the armed forces to whatever size may be deemed necessary by our military authorities.

Senator Taft's suggestion has particular force when applied to the pending induction of married men with children. Adaptation to the Army will be difficult enough for all fathers. Selective Service authorities have been wise to defer them as long as possible. In the case of fathers in their thirties, the wrench of leaving their families will be severe indeed. It will represent a real uprooting. For the satisfactions of such men are derived from their home associations. And they will probably be unable to share in the compensations which younger men may find in the ruggedness and physical activity of Army life.

The size of our Army must, of course, be determined by the military authorities who know the magnitude of the combat task still to be accomplished. To our view the size should be reviewed in the light of the progress of the war. We have arrived at a stage in the war's development when a reappraisal of our needs might be in order. Congress seems strongly inclined to undertake such a reappraisal when it reconvenes next month if the military authorities balk at it. But even if this is not done, Selective Service could well give thought to some change in the order, if not in the rate, of inductions. Its objective must always be the raising of necessary strength with a minimum of hardship and dislocation to civilian existence.

Betrayed By Badoglio

Mussolini fell on July 25. Eight days later the Algiers radio in an official Allied broadcast to Italy told the Italians: "Badoglio is betraying you . . . Badoglio goes on with the war . . . Badoglio has kept from you messages addressed to you by General Eisenhower. Badoglio has done nothing for peace."

The truth of this indictment of Italy's new premier is incontestable. But the fact that the Allies found it necessary to make such a statement constitutes a tragic confession of failure. It is evident that those responsible for the policy we have pursued toward Italy since July 25 guessed wrong. They assumed that with Mussolini overthrown his successor would at once capitulate to the Allies, since it was no mystery that the Italian people were fed up with the war. They assumed that the new regime would do everything possible to rid Italy of German troops and spare the nation the horrors of further Allied bombing.

They were wrong. Badoglio was not the man they thought he was. They had been placing their bets on a horse that didn't exist. Badoglio didn't deceive us. In his very first statement as premier he said: "The war goes on." Our leaders chose to explain away that remark. But it proved literally true. Italian soldiers continued to fight the Allies in Sicily. Not a finger was lifted by the Badoglio regime to disarm the Germans inside Italy's borders. Nothing was done to prevent the Germans from overrunning Istria and the Po Valley and making that industrially important and strategically vital area into a Nazi bastion. Much, indeed, may have been done to help them.

So now the Allies find themselves forced to do what they had hoped to avoid—renew the bombing of Italy and conquer it piecemeal. And now we are appealing to the Italian people to rebel against "the men of Rome." There is no tenderness any more about "the men of Rome."

"If you do not make your voices heard," said the Algiers radio to the Italians, "if Badoglio does not obey your will—we shall bombard your ports and your industries by day and night. Our land forces will soon begin an offensive on the Italian mainland. We shall push on inexorably through Italy. You will inevitably suffer all the horrors of war—a war on the peninsula." It would probably have been more merciful in the long run and far better in every other way had we pressed the advantage we secured through the fall of Mussolini by driving forward at full speed immediately after that event, instead of waiting for Badoglio to do our bidding.

Middle Class

The prevailing national perplexity about taxes is unlikely to be diminished by Senator George's latest observations on the subject. The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee voiced an opinion on Sunday that any drastic increase of individual income taxes might bring about the ruin of the country's middle class. The Senator's anxiety stems from the fact that under law income tax rates must be uniform. "Since we have this principle," he said, "any drastic increase would be overwhelming for those taxpayers with low or moderate fixed incomes, such as wages, salaries, self-owned business, annuities and the like."

That higher taxes would be burdensome and uncomfortable for this class of taxpayer is obvious enough. But higher taxes would be nothing like so burdensome and uncomfortable, from their point of view, as inflation. It is precisely the middle class, and particularly those members of the middle class with low or moderate fixed incomes, to whom inflation presents the direst peril. Wherever inflation has struck in the past, it has struck the middle class with the greatest severity. And its destruction of the middle class has commonly been the preface to demagoguery and dictatorship. As Senator George observed, "The virility and strength of any civilization depends upon the middle classes." Our objective, then, must be to insure an economic stability under which the property interests of the middle classes can be maintained.

Economic stability is imperiled today by the discrepancy between Federal revenue and Federal outlays and by an immense popular purchasing power which, in view of a shortage of consumer goods, persistently forces prices upward. If the trend in the direction of inflated prices is not arrested, the people with fixed incomes will be bereft indeed. They will likewise witness the sapping of value out of their savings. The imposition of higher taxes upon them now would be merely the imposition of a temporary burden for the sake of saving them from irreparable ruin. Senator George is in the position of a surgeon who fails to perform a necessary operation because it would cause his patient some passing discomfort. "Next year, being an election year," he remarked somewhat cynically, "there will be no tax act." This is apparently the congressional answer to the President's latest demand for "a truly stiff program of additional taxes, savings or both." It is an answer which is at once an affront to the good sense of the American people and a threat to their economic security.

Riots In Harlem

Harlem's riots of Sunday night and Monday appear to differ sharply from the recent racial fighting in Detroit. In the motor capital, lawless groups of white men apparently made it their business to beat up or shoot down Negroes out of racial animosity. The disorders in New York consisted of sporadic fighting between residents of Harlem and the police plus widespread vandalism. "This was not a race riot," Mayor LaGuardia declared in appealing to the "decent, law-abiding citizens of Harlem" to help curb the wave of disorders. "There was no conflict between groups of our citizens. What happened was the thoughtless, criminal acts of hoodlums, reckless, irresponsible people." Yet it may be assumed that both incidents stem from the general tension of the times. No doubt Harlem has been seething with resentment over the Detroit affair, as other Negro districts have been. Probably its more volatile elements seized the first flimsy excuse they could find to set off an orgy of lawlessness.

The incident which touched off the rioting appears to have been the shooting of a Negro soldier by a white policeman. The soldier is said to have interfered with the policeman's attempt to arrest a Negro woman for disorderly conduct. Such incidents always stir up ill feeling regardless of where the chief fault may lie. But no such clash could of itself explain the smashing of windows, the looting, the showers of bricks from roof tops, the shooting and disorders that followed over a period of many hours. Only deep-seated unrest could turn a minor incident into a roaring series of riots that cost the lives of four, injured 195, and necessitated more than 360 arrests. The existence of such unrest certainly explodes the easy assumption that all is well on the home front.

Our entire Nation has a responsibility to probe into and eliminate so far as possible the causes of friction which make such tragic outbursts possible. Negro leaders everywhere have an equal obligation to convince their followers that they cannot hope to improve their situation by the tactics apparently employed in Harlem. Resort to lawlessness, particularly when the provocation is minor or nonexistent, can only destroy the constructive work of those who are trying to ameliorate the conditions under which many Negroes live.

Lin Sen

It must have come as a surprise to most people to read that Lin Sen was President of China. Chiang Kai-shek is commonly supposed to have that office. In point of fact, the generalissimo's title in the government at Nanking, in addition to that as head of China's military forces, is the Presidency of the Executive Yuan or department. This is roughly equivalent to the Premiership. Above the executive department are three committees which carry out the supervision of government in the name of the National Congress of the Kuomintang, or the Nationalist Party. For China, like Russia, has a single party government, a system provided for while the Chinese are going through "a period of tutelage," as this predemocratic stage is called.

The system fulfills the requirements laid down by the Father of the Chinese Revolution, Sun Yat-sen, and Lin Sen, who has just died at the age of 79, was one of its architects. He was one of Dr. Sun's earliest collaborators. He helped to enlist the financial support of the overseas Chinese for the revolutionary cause at home. In America he opened a branch of the Nationalist Party, and raised $1,500,000 among his compatriots to overthrow the monarchy, which was achieved in 1911. In all the Chinese colonies in this country he is still remembered affectionately. At home he was revered for his wisdom and modesty. No figurehead, the President is said to have been so completely in Chiang Kai-shek's confidence that the generalissimo seldom made a move without asking his counsel. The United Nations have lost a true friend in Lin Sen.

CULTIVATOR BOY

High on the sulky's iron seat
He rides into the summer heat,
And through the creeping cloud of dust
Combs out the earth's compliant crust-
The corn just high enough to rustle
Against the horses's sweat-caked muscl
They know there isn't any hurry,
But venting the burden of his worry
He slaps the lines with futile thumps
Over their tough and lazy rumps.
He mulls his monologic dream;
Two animals and a machine
And boy are blended in routine.
And so the forenoon moves along
Until they hear the dinner gong.
The boy yells "Whoa," and then unhitches,
Dodging the horsetails' stinging switches . . .
He has come back to earth again,
To corn and wheat and cows and men.
He knows now what his mother meant
By "I wonder where the morning went."
But he would be surprised to know
Where farmboys' mornings really go:
How much goes into golden ears
And what is saved for riper years.

PAUL H. OEHSER.

Democratic Party

By Mark Sullivan

Split In Two Groups

THERE HAS been, during the past 10 days, an episodic flurry of politics in the familiar American sense, the politics of two great parties opposing each other. A Democratic President made a speech. Republican leaders criticized it, and for a few days echoes resounded.

But that was an episode merely. The real politics of Washington, the politics that dedetermine day to day decisions and events, is the politics long known in Europe as that of left-wing versus right-wing. As staged in Washington now, it is a struggle between two groups within the framework of the Democratic Party. One group consists of traditional Democrats. The other consists of persons whom the traditional Democrats call radicals, and who reasonably and mildly can be called ultraliberals.

The mechanism of this politics lies in access to the President, in influence upon his decisions, public statements and actions. For nearly 10 years the ultraliberals had it all their own way. But war brought several necessities. One was for deference to the traditional Democrats who compose the majority in Congress. Another was for filling administrative war posts with men of more practical temperament than the ultraliberals.

IN THIS condition came changes. In charge of Price Administration, Mr. Leon Henderson was supplanted by traditional Democrat Prentiss Brown, former Senator from Michigan. Traditional Democrat James T. Byrnes, formerly of the Supreme Court and of the Senate, moved into a White House office, close to the President's person. Mr. Byrnes' function and title varied, but his power and influence were great and increasing. Two old-school Democrats, former Congressman Fred Vinson of Kentucky and Marvin Jones of Texas, came to be used by the President more and more for important functions.

The ultraliberals did not like it, felt themselves slipping. They took a step which, whatever its direct motives, and whatever led up to it, was in the spirit and had the effect of calling for a showdown, of forcing the President's hand. Vice President Wallace, beloved evangel of the ultraliberals, made a bitter and sensational attack upon a member of the President's Cabinet, traditional Democrat Jesse Jones.

In acting on the issue the President, while he rebuked both, had the effect of deciding against Mr. Wallace—the President removed him form headship of his most important function, headship of the Board of Economic Warfare. Throughout the ultraradical group, and in the part of the press they inspire, went a moaning: "The President has let us down, the President has abandoned liberalism."

AFTER A week or so of wailing, the ultraliberals pulled themselves together for action and strategy. It was not action for revenge. Mr. Wallace made a speech, carefully prepared and much publicized in advance. Mr. Wallace's speech, delivered in Detroit July 25, would have made a sensation—but for an inconsiderate action by Signor Mussolini, news of whose fall drove Mr. Wallace's speech off the first page.

About the President, Mr. Wallace was forgiving and assuring. He said that in 10 years' acquaintance he had never known the President, in the long run, to go back on liberalism. To the ultraliberals, and on their behalf, Mr. Wallace said, in effect, "Keep up the good fight." In the rest of his speech Mr. Wallace tore into those who, according to Mr. Wallace's definition, are not liberals. The speech was a strongly epithetical denunciation of those whom the ultraliberals don't like—and a rallying cry declaring that the liberals must and will organize and work for their objective in next year's election.

The program of the ultraliberals, as respects Mr. Roosevelt, may be regarded as either a promise or a threat. Alternately and simultaneously they say to the President either of two things. Either "We will build up so much sentiment for liberalism that you will be reelected next year"; or, "If you don't go our way, the sentiment we build up will be disappointed and lukewarm about you next year."

There isn't much doubt that in general the President will follow the course the ultraliberals want. Under pressure of necessity for effectiveness in conducting the war, and for going along with Congress, he defers to the traditional Democrats and makes use of them. But the persons who most influence his permanent course are ultraliberals.

The Balkans

By Paul Schubert

Now Open To Allied Invasion

THE CRACKING of Italy has laid bare the Balkan Peninsula to Allied invasion.

As we now realize, the Balkans have been open to invasion for many months. Axis defense of the Balkans has hinged upon the effectiveness of Italian troops. For all Germany's military power, the German army is not large enough to defend all Europe from the Channel to the Russian Front, from Scandinavia to the Balkans—not alone and unaided. Even if German troops did the hard combat part, they must depend upon labor battalions, supply organizations, thousands of men behind the combat fronts. Germany was used to calling upon other Axis powers and satellites for these behind-the-front forces.

Once Italian troops are withdrawn from the Balkans, the Germans will have their hands full even if we do not invade the Balkans. The local population is quite resourceful and strong enough to make matters uncomfortable and even dangerous for the relatively small German occupation forces.

For local strength, the Germans must concentrate . . . but that means they must strip many parts of the Balkans bare of defenses. It is these parts that invite our landing.

THERE ARE several ways of entry to the Balkans. The way closest to Germany's heart is that which the Germans have been fortifying during recent days—the Istrian Peninsula, at the northern end of the Adriatic. Trieste and Fiume-Susak are seaports with good landing facilities, with roads and railroads leading into the interior. If we could seize a strong beachhead there and use it as a base for offensive air power, we should be able to bomb as far north as Leipzig, Dresden and Breslau without stretching the offensive range of our aircraft. Small wonder that the Nazis acted swiftly when the collapse of Italian police power set local factions power-grabbing for Istria. But in spite of the troops moved in by the Nazis, this may still be a very promising invasion route.

Another route made possible by Italy's collapse is through the mid-Yugoslavian seaport of Split (Spalato). This Adriatic harbor was Jugoslavia's principal port, and while the railway leading inland passes through tortuous mountain country and is in part single-tracked, a beachhead at Split would be a point of entry for air power which would prove very effective in cleaning up the Balkans, and ultimately in striking directly at South Germany, Bohemia, Moravia and Austria.

THE CHANCES are that German troops are present in considerable strength for the defense of Salonika, the traditional point of entry in Greece, leading to the Vardar Valley.

But it is interesting to speculate about the effect on German strategy of an Allied invasion by way of the Black Sea, supported by Turkey—a landing in Bulgaria or Rumania.

It is possible that such an invasion, even on a small scale, might work with an effect similar to that of the relatively small-scale invasion of Sicily (small-scale in terms of the continental mass armies). Bulgaria and Rumania are, like Italy, stooge-props under the Axis structure. As long as they were untouched, they have given effective support to Hitler's European Festung. But they are not very solid props, and it doesn't take much to knock them out from under. The German structure which they have been supporting is large, rigid and very heavy; it has needed all the support it could get, since Hitler has built out ambitiously in every direction . . .

Remove the props—and who knows when the whole thing will crack.

Invasion of the Balkans has particular bearing upon the strength of the German position in Russia. If we invade the Balkans, we threaten the southern flank of the long, long corridor of supply which keeps the German armies in Russia going.

A United Nations invasion of the Balkans must be greeted as an act of liberation by the millions of Balkan people held in bondage by Axis occupation.

As a matter of fact, however, this "liberation" presents perhaps the greatest problem of Balkan occupation.

Temperamental, passionate, belligerent and brave, the Balkan people are divided into factions whose outstanding characteristic is intransigence.

Serb, Croat and Macedonian, Slovenian and Hungarian, Bulgarian and Rumanian, Greek and Albanian—all have claims upon us . . . all want something—all hold their individual wants to be holier than the wants of anyone else in the world.

Politics, religion, race — old quarrels and new . . . all divide our Balkan "Fifth Column." The one thing in which all are united is hatred of the Axis.

PUC Sustained

The Post is correct in its editorial of July 31, 1943, that there is much more at stake in the 2-1 decision of the Court of Appeals sustaining the Public Utilities Commission's 2-1 approval of an increase in gas rates than the 3 cents a month. However, the District government committee of the District of Columbia Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild feels it its duty to point out that The Post is completely incorrect in its statement that the real issue is surrender of the responsibilities of utility regulatory agencies to OPA.

The real issue was correctly stated by Mr. Justice Miller in his dissenting opinion. The issue is whether an increase in rates is necessary or justifiable, in view of the stabilization legislation and the war. The position of OPA and OES in the case was that the commission had granted the increase without giving effect or adequate consideration to the need for keeping down the cost of living; that the company should not be allowed to pass on its war taxes to the consuming public, and that the company has been earning, and will continue to earn, a sufficient return without need for any rate increases. We suggest the following points for The Post's and the public's consideration:

1. Is it not true that OPA contended that the company's earnings would be so high in 1942 that the company would have to pay an excess profits tax for that year? Is it not true that a company officer testified under oath as late as September that no such excess profits tax would have to be paid? Did not the company pay an excess profits tax for 1942, even though the commission found the company's officer had accurately stated the facts?

2. Did not OPA contend that the company's profits would increase substantially during the next year and therefore no increase in rates was necessary? Is it not true that for the first five months in 1943 the gas company's profits, after all taxes, increased from $1,246,000 to $1,443,000, and this was after the company made provision of over $100,000 more for Federal income taxes in the year 1943 than in the year 1942 because its profits were going up?

3. Is it not true that in spite of the fact that the commission found the increase necessary so that the company could sell its securities, in March of this year, after Mr. Justice Letts had set aside the order of the commission granting the company's increase, the company did sell its securities?

4. Is it not true that Washington is practically the only large city in the country where gas rates have gone up in the last year, and that, notwithstanding the fact that the gas company's earnings are higher than most gas companies in the country? Was not OPA justified, therefore, in asking for a reconsideration of the sliding-scale arrangements, in the light of the war, a request flatly refused by the majority of the commission and sustained by the 2-1 vote of the Court of Appeals?

5. Is it not true that the only reason the entire increase requested by the company was turned down was because of OPA's policies? Is it not also true that the small reduction in electric rates recently ordered by the commission was because of partial approval of OPA's policy that war taxes should not be charged against the rate payers?

6. The gas company, like the local electric company, has grown tremendously profitable at the expense of the rate payers in the District. They are certainly in a doubtful position in asking their customers to pay their war taxes.

Mother's Day in Africa

I am an American soldier, from the State of North Carolina, stationed with the American Armed Forces in Africa.

It is Mother's Day back home in the States today, as it is the second Sunday in the month of May. Several of the soldiers here have written letters back to their mothers, telling them of their love and devotion. Certainly, it is our good American mothers who have been a powerful influence in making our country the greatest nation on earth. Yes, today I am wearing a beautiful red poppy in honor of my dear little mother. These beautiful red poppies grow wild here in northern Africa. I wish that you could see them, for they are very beautiful. I suppose that millions of you back there in the States will be wearing red roses today; and I guess many of you will be wearing white roses also. But still you have the sacred memory of your mother's love and devotion to you when she was living. May God bless our good mothers.

Educating Parents

The FBI and Metropolitan Police Department discussed juvenile delinquency Tuesday night. The speakers can discuss forever, but until parents pay more attention to their children's minds than they do, it will be to no avail. Most parents pay attention to their children's bodies and outward behavior, but how many pay attention to their minds. They say we have teachers for that. Does a child have a mind only when in school?

Most parents should be trained, like any other profession.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Partners Talk It Over

Hitler—Well, shall we call the roll?

Tojo—What's the use? We both know we're one man shy this time!

Hitler—What do you think of that big dumbkoff running out on us?

Tojo—Is there no chance we can get him back?

Hitler—None.

Tojo—Good!

Hitler—Oh, I admit he was quite a responsibility, but he made a quorum.

Tojo—Cheer up. No matter what happens Japan will always stick to you.

Hitler (shuddering)—No threats, please!

Tojo—I always knew he wouldn't last.

Hitler—Lissen, if you and I are around for 21 straight years we'll be lucky.

Tojo—Mussolini survived merely because he put on a good show for a long time. But a great leader must have something besides showmanship and a loud voice.

Hitler—That's beginning to dawn on me!

Tojo—Benito always lacked stability.

Hitler—Yes, but the trouble was that he lacked so much of it all of a sudden. We were dreadfully mistaken in him.

Tojo—Why the "we?"

Hitler—He was your partner as well as mine.

Tojo—Oh, no! He was in the firm long before I joined.

Hitler—When I was new in the business I used to pattern after Mussolini. I copied many of his ideas and manners.

Tojo—How did you come out?

Hitler—I won't know 'til the returns are all in.

Tojo—There was one thing I liked about his style.

Hitler—What?

Tojo—He was a great backstabber. His technic was much like the Japanese.

Hitler—He was a little slower on the draw.

Tojo—Yes, but his downstroke was a thing of beauty. He had form that was almost Oriental.

Hitler—I'm not sure whether it was form or mimicry.

Tojo—How is Germany taking Mussolini's downfall?

Hitler—I haven't let it know all the details. I'm having Goebbels modify the picture.

Tojo—How can you temper a picture of a fat man in an ascent?

Hitler—It's a form of art peculiar to German rulers.

Tojo—Well, our setup has certainly taken a strange turn, but it's largely your responsibility. Look what happened in Africa and Sicily. You should have stopped that. You don't think the enemy could do a thing like that to the Japanese, do you?

Hitler—I'm afraid that you won't have to wait too long for the right answer to that, Tojo. These decadent democracies are tougher than I thought. Where did we ever get the conviction they were pushovers?

Tojo—I got it from reading "Mein Kampf." Where did you get it?

Hitler—I got it from writing it!

"It was explained that the John Durfee, represented in the OWI broadcast to England as 'the great American commentator,' was wholly an imaginary person devised for short-wave broadcasts."—Newspaper item.

It's all right to fool England; she's merely an ally, partner and friend.

Ickes' Complex

I've been waiting for some one to set Miss Ann Peters right about gasoline rationing, but it seems that they are going to let her get by with that Ickes complex in regard to rationing gasoline. She states in her tirade of July 19: "It seems to me the first fault lay in the way A cards were issued in the beginning, and that a new start is necessary to save gasoline and make a fair division of present supplies."

No doubt Miss Peters has a B or C card, so naturally she wouldn't see the other side of the argument. As I see it, there was nothing radically wrong with the way "A cards were issued at the beginning," but the way OPA started to juggling the amounts of gasoline A-card holders were allowed. At first it was four gallons to use for any purpose one wished; then cut to three for the same purposes; then made it a criminal offense for an A-card holder to drive at all unless on essential business; then again cut to a little less than an average of one and one-half gallons per week to drive as one wished; then again made criminals out of all the A-card holders if caught driving anywhere except on essential business. In the latter case every one was considered guilty until he could prove himself innocent, thus reversing the law wherein every one must be considered innocent until proven guilty.

I have read in various papers how different fliers have been decorated. It is very nice of the Government to honor these men, but how about the ground crews, who I know are working 18 to 20 hours per day to keep the plane in flying condition JOHN H. MAULE.

Too Fast

By Ernest Lindley

Mussolini Collapsed Too Soon

THE EUROPEAN war is moving almost too fast. Opportunities seem to be outrunning Allied means of exploiting them fully. Paradoxically, it looks as if Mussolini's collapse came too soon, from our viewpoint. It might have served us better if it had come two or three months later, when Allied armies were fully prepared to invade Italy and the Balkans, and possibly other portions of the European continent, and Germany had been worn down further by aerial bombing.

LINDLEY

For the downfall of Mussolini appears to have been a stiffer blow to the Germans than most Allied observers dared expect it to be. As Prime Minister Churchill reminded the House of Commons, Italy is perhaps only one-tenth of Germany's war strength. In certain respects Italy has been a military and economic liability to the Germans. Most of the Italian peninsula is of no value to the defense of Germany's inner empire. Hitler and the German high command must have expected, or been resigned to, the loss of most of Italy in due course.

But the German people were not braced for it. Dispatches from Berlin to neutral capitals testify that the collapse of the Fascist regime struck them with terrific force. The official German propagandists, also apparently caught completely off-guard, fell into silence.

GERMAN PROPAGANDA has been hard-pressed now for several weeks. It has had to explain the stoppage and reversal of the German offensive in Russia, and the systematic, progressive destruction of German cities by Allied bombers. There is only one explanation which can be made: that Germany is in the process of losing the war and can avoid complete defeat only by extreme effort and complete stoicism. Dr. Goebbels can challenge the Germans to exhibit a fortitude matching that of the British during the aerial blitz of 1940-41. But the British, although they stood alone, could look hopefully toward Russia and the United States. The Germans can look for help from no one. They can see that the forces surrounding them continue to grow in power, while their own strength is ebbing.

The President has confirmed that the invasion of Sicily was decided upon at the Casablanca conference. The preparations for it were being made while the Tunisian campaign was being fought. Sicily was needed to nail down control of the Mediterranean. In that sense, the invasion of Sicily was the closing chapter of the African campaign, rather than the opening chapter of the European campaign. Where the western Allies would go next was left open at the Casablanca conference, and may not have been finally decided even at the May meeting of the Combined Chiefs of Staff in Washington. Much would depend on the behavior of the Italian forces and civilians in Sicily, the effects of strategic bombing of Italy proper and the response of the Germans to the threat to her Italian ally. For example, if the Germans had come running to the aid of the Italians, the invasion of the Italian mainland might have been deferred or abandoned in favor of landings elsewhere.

ACCORDING TO one school of thought, Italy was not worth the cost of invading it against serious resistance. For after Italy had been taken, the Alpine barrier would still lie between the Allies and Germany. Some top military strategists therefore regarded the invasion of Italy as an "eccentric" operation. The most we could gain, they said, was the use of the plains of Lombardy and Piedmont to bomb the factories and transportation facilities of central Europe—and the Rumanian oil fields. Now we have reached those oil fields by another route.

Others placed a higher military value on the control of the peninsula. But events have demonstrated once more the importance of politics and morale in warfare. The brittle shell of Italian fascism was shattered by the shock of the invasion of Sicily and the bombs rained on Italy from the air. When fascism crumbled, Europe shook from one end to the other.

The attitude of the civilian population of western Sicily is intensely significant. The Sicilians did not behave like a defeated people. They welcomed American troops as liberators and, one correspondent reports, already regard themselves and expect to be regarded as our allies.

We have barely got one toe inside the door of Europe, but even that is enough to produce a European crisis. The question seems to be whether the Allies can keep on pushing fast enough to take full advantage of their present opportunities.

Joe Doakes Goes to War

Fighting Men Embark

New York Port of Embarkation.—This is it.

This is the jumping off place, the spot where soldiers start toward combat. Here is the awareness of the sea, of its mystery and danger—sudden awareness, the vision of far battles, the hard knot that won't dissolve in the stomach. This is the loading of a troop ship.

The ferry pushes its ugly flat face, catfish-mouthed, into the pool of light at the end of the pier, nuzzles gently up against the pilings, its engines silent.

Suddenly the band in the light blares into rhythmic sound—"Nothing Can Stop the Army Air Corps," "The Caissons Go Rolling Along;" then, oddly, "She's Nobody's Sweetheart Now," "Sweet Sue," "I'll Be 'Round to Get You in a Taxi, Honey."

"You'd be surprised," the colonel says, low voiced, "the things they ask the band to play. We had to fight like hell to get permission to have a band here. Got 'em to change the regulations. Funny, the things they ask for. Means a lot to 'em. Been a helluva morale factor."

Off the Ferry

They're marching off the ferry, now; single file, past the band in the glare on the open dock, into the cavernous interior of the pier shed that no amount of lamps seems able to brighten beyond good twilight. The rifles and carbines hang stiffly on their slings, and "they" bend as they walk under the weight of knapsack and blankets rolled in a shelter half and the rest of a full kit, plus the bulking barracks bags hoisted on shoulders.

Strange how soldiers all look alike. There are tall men and short men, thin ones and fat ones, but no individuals until, for some reason, this line halts, and one of them takes off his helmet, and is just Joe Doaks, the kid from three doors up the street, with a girl in the house at the corner, and a jalopy waiting for the two of them when he gets back. He was always tinkering with that jalopy.

Then the line jerks into motion again, the helmet goes back on, and Joe's gone—another soldier moves around the M. P. acting as pylon, climbs the stairs to the floor above, moves up to the desk where his name is checked against the passenger list, a safe arrival card is filled out for mailing to his family when the ship reaches the other side, and he gets a pasteboard telling him where to find his own particular spot on board.

Grimness Eased

Not so tense, now. The music, the wise crack from the general who was standing alongside as Joe stepped off the ferry, the lemonade and doughnuts and candy and cigarettes from the pleasant women in the trim uniforms of the Red Cross, the bustle over last minute routine at the desk—one or another or all have eased the jaw-tight grimness of the moment.

Up the gangplank, pushing against the cleats, and there's a momentary shock, stepping out of the shed, at the sight of the big ship lying silent beside the pier.

Then Joe's aboard, and a guide is taking him and the other Joes with him, around a turn, down the stairs, turn here, up this way, turn again, here we are—a huge room, its spaces filled with bunks, row upon row, tier after tier from the floor to the lofty ceiling, wall to wall, with just enough room to move between them and no more. Iron frames and stretched canvas, simple and bare and bluntly utilitarian.

Coming aboard has been the tensest moment of Joe Doak's Army life, although he knew, generally and vaguely, from the moment he was sworn in that the time probably would come, and has known since he reached the staging area that it would come soon—maybe a couple of days, maybe a week, maybe longer, but pretty soon.

It's the Army Camp

Staging area, so far as the soldier is concerned, means the Army camp where he gets his final checkup, becomes part of a number or a code word for an overseas destination, gets to be a number on a passenger list. It looks like any other camp.

But the atmosphere, the feel of the place, is different. And that's because, despite its familiar appearance, this is a very special camp—when Joe comes in here, he's really headed for action. And he knows it.

Here in this camp Joe's carbine is taken away from him, and given a thorough inspection. The slightest thing wrong, and it goes to the shop for repair—Joe gets another.

Naked but for socks and shoes, Joe and his fellows in their barracks file past a line of medical officers who peer into their throats, check for hernia, look for any illness or defect that may have appeared since the unit started for the staging area.

Dental officers check their teeth minutely, and if any work has to be done, it's done in a hurry. Joe has been known to get a new bridge within 24 hours.

Railhead Reached

By the time the physical and equipment inspections are completed, the order for Joe's unit to entrain may have been received. Maybe it won't come through for a while, but sooner or later it does and the unit is marching from the barracks to the trains waiting in the large yards inside the camp.

The men reach the railhead—just tracks and platforms, no vaulted and painted waiting rooms here—to the stirring music of the post band, and without confusion or fuss file quickly on the cars. They've been lined up in exactly the reverse of the order in which they will go aboard the ferry and into the pier shed.

For Joe's reception at the staging area, the inspections and special care, the embarkation itself, involving tense or eager and strictly personal emotional reactions on his part, are only a fraction of the huge and complex and carefully planned operations which move constantly with machinelike precision under the command of Maj. Gen. Homer M. Groninger, commanding the New York Port of Embarkation.

Transportation Job

It's an Army Transportation Corps job, and from the moment Joe enters the staging area, it's Groninger and Groninger's large and busy staff that rule his life. The soldier's start toward the port area began long before he was aware of it, in an order from the War Department informing Groninger that certain units will be sent overseas at an indicated time.

As an indication of how much more than troops moves through the embarkation port, officials estimate it takes eight and one-half tons of supplies initially for every man sent overseas, to get him ashore and keep him going for 30 days, then one and a half tons a month to keep him supplied.

While Joe is being checked aboard the troop transport, other ships, miles away, are lying alongside other piers, loading with supplies. Food and clothing and cigarette and candy may be going aboard from the pier, while over the lighters alongside the ship's huge booms are swinging out, the donkey engines sputtering and the cables slapping as they lift half-tracks, or trucks or jeeps or can after can of gasoline into the hold—all to keep Joe in the best fighting trim, with everything he needs, and as much as possible of the other stuff that he just wants.

Yes, this is it—this is the jumping off place. And what does Joe think of it?

"Well," he says quietly and seriously, "to tell you the truth, I'm sort of glad to be going, at last."

Steinbeck Reveals New Truths About Pvt. Big Train Mulligan

By John Steinbeck

Somewhere in England.—It has been possible to compile further data on the life and methods of Private Big Train Mulligan, a man who has succeeded in making a good part of Etousa work for him. It has been said of him by one of his enemies, of whom he has very few, that he would be a gold brick but he is too damn lazy.

In a course of close study, extending over several days, certain qualities have stood out in the private in addition to those mentioned in the previous report. Big Train has a very curious method. If you are not very careful you find yourself carrying his luggage, and you never know how it happened. Recently, in one of the minor crises, which are an everyday occurrence to Big Train, this writer came out of a kind of a haze of friendship to find that he had not only lent Mulligan £2 10s, but had forced it on him without security and had, furthermore, emerged from the transaction with a sense of having been honored. How this was accomplished is anybody's guess. Some time in the future, no doubt, Mulligan will pay this money back, but in such a manner that it will seem that he has been robbed.

Mulligan has carried looting, requisitioning, whatever you want to call it, to its highest point. He is a firm believer in the adage that an army moves on its stomach, a position he rather likes. He loves nice foods and he usually gets them. A few days ago a party was visiting a ship which had recently put into a port in England with war materials. The party went to the bridge, met the master and the other officers, drank a small, very good cup of coffee and ate a quarter ounce of cookies, conversing politely the while. On coming back to the dock where the car stood and where Mulligan should conceivably be on duty, of course, no such thing was true.

Mulligan at the Icebox

Mulligan was not in sight. One of this party who has known the private and admired him for some time, remarked: "If I were to look for Mulligan right now I should find the icebox on that ship with a good deal of confidence that Mulligan would not be far from it." Accordingly, the party found its way to the ship's refrigerator and there was Mulligan, leaning jauntily back against a table. He was holding the thickest roast beef sandwich imaginable in his hand. He has learned to eat very rapidly while talking on all subjects. He never misses a bite nor a word. His pace seems slow but his execution is magnificent. Not between bites but during bites he was telling an admiring circle, made up of a steward and three naval gunners a story of rapine and other amusements which completely distracted them from noticing that Big Train had a foot-high stack of sandwiches behind him on the table.

The senior officer said: "Mulligan, don't you think it is about time we went along?"

Mulligan said: "Yes, sir. I was just coming along but I thought the captain might be a little hungry. I was just getting a snack ready for the captain." He reached behind him and brought out the great pile of roast beef sandwiches which he passed about. Now, whether these sandwiches had been prepared for just such an emergency or whether Mulligan had intended to eat them himself will never be known. We prefer to believe that it was just as he said. Mulligan is a thoughtful friend and an unselfish man. Besides this, he never goes into a blind alley. He has always a line of retreat, which simply proves that he is a good soldier.

Should his officer be faint with hunger, Mulligan has a piece of chocolate to tide the captain over. What difference that the chocolate belonged to the captain in the first place and he was led to believe that it was all gone? The fact of the matter is that when he needs his own chocolate, Mulligan is happy to give him half of it.

His Speech Distinctive

The Big Train has been in England now something over a year and he has acquired a speech which can only be described as Georgia-Oxford. He addresses people as mate or even mait. He refuses to learn that he cannot get petrol at a gas station, but he refers to lifts and braces.

Many an officer has tried to get Mulligan promoted to a corporalcy, if only to have something to break him from, but he is firmly entrenched in his privacy. There is nothing you can do to Mulligan except put him in jail and then you have no one to drive you. If he were a corporal you could break him, but Mulligan has so far circumvented any such move on the part of his superiors. When the recommendation has gone in, at just the right moment he has been guilty of some tiny infraction of the rules—not much—but just enough to make it impossible to promote him. His car is a little bit dirty at inspection. Mulligan does six hours full-pack drill and is safe from promotion for a good time.

Mulligan has nearly everything he wants—women, leisure, travel and companionship. He wants only one thing and he is trying to work out a way to get it. He would like a dog, preferably a Scottie, and he would like to take it in his car with him. So far he has not worked out his method, but it is a foregone conclusion that he will not only get his dog but that his officer will feed it, and when Mulligan has a date in the evening his officer will probably take care of the dog for him and will feel very good about it, too. The Army is a perfect setting for this Mulligan. He would be foolish ever to leave it. And he is rarely foolish.

The Gallup Poll

Bricker Leads in Ohio Presidential Poll

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 3.—Although both Thomas E. Dewey and Wendell Willkie have a wider popular following among Republicans throughout the Nation, Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio is the overwhelming choice of Republican voters in his home State for the 1944 G. O. P. presidential nomination.

No other Republican comes anywhere near matching Bricker's strength in Ohio. The Governor's grip on this key State is such that his popularity there as a Republican presidential candidate is nearly twice that of Dewey or Willkie, combined.

The views of Ohio Republicans were sounded by the Institute in a special survey in which each voter was asked to express his choice among seven men who have been most widely discussed as possible G. O. P. presidential material. The question was put as follows:

"Which one of these men would you pefer as the Republican candidate for President next year?"

The vote of Ohio Republicans is:

Bricker	54%
Dewey	19
MacArthur	12
Willkie	11
Stassen	4
Saltonstall	*
Warren	*

*Less than 1 per cent.

Similar Institute surveys among Republican voters have been reported for three other large States—New York, Illinois and Pennsylvania. They showed that Governor Dewey's popularity among New York Republicans is about equal to Governor Bricker's among Ohio Republicans.

Willkie runs relatively stronger in Pennsylvania and New York than he does in Illinois or Ohio.

Following is the New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois vote:

NEW YORK

Dewey	53%
Willkie	27
MacArthur	8
Bricker	5
Stassen	4
Saltonstall	2
Warren	1

PENNSYLVANIA

Dewey	38%
Willkie	33
MacArthur	14
Bricker	9
Stassen	5
Warren	1
Saltonstall	*

ILLINOIS

Dewey	41%
Willkie	19
MacArthur	18
Bricker	11
Stassen	10
Saltonstall	1
Warren	*

Ickes Moves to Return Coal Mines to Owners

Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes, Government operator of the coal mines, yesterday took the first step toward returning the coal mines to their owners by asking the operating managers of the mines to advise him when, in their opinion, full productive efficiency is restored in their mines.

Ickes said he took the step in compliance with the Connally-Smith Anti-strike Act which requires him to return the mines to their owners 60 days after pre-seizure productive efficiency is restored. He made it clear, however, that he was not necessarily bound by any determination of the mine managers who are actually the private mine operators pressed into Government service at the time the mine were seized.

Restoration Claimed

Former Senator Edward R. Burke, spokesman for the Southern Appalachian coal operators, commented that full productive efficiency had already been restored "in practically every mine in the Southern area." He expressed the belief that a similar situation existed in all the mines of the country.

Ickes has asked Attorney General Biddle for an opinion on whether the law requires the return of the mines piecemeal as they return to full efficiency, or all at once.

The Federal coal mine administrator also issued regulations stating that no operating manager "is authorized, or shall be regarded as having authority, expressed or implied, to bind or impose liability on the United States or any of its officials or agents in the absence of specific direction or order by the administrator (Ickes) to that effect."

Procedure Outlined

The regulations also outlined procedure for relinquishing Government control of the mines when Ickes is prepared to surrender them. The mine owners were given the option of giving the Government a complete waiver of all damages incurred during Government operation, or a limited waiver spelling out the claims for damages.

Refusal to deliver either waiver would operate to continue Government operation of the mines while a full accounting is made.

How much longer the Government continues in possession of the mines is likely to depend on the outcome of the War Labor Board's consideration of the miners' agreement with Illinois coal operators.

Canal Tug Blast Kills 8

Balboa, Canal Zone, Aug. 3 (INS). The captain of a Panama Canal tug, the Chagres, and seven Negro crew members were killed today when the vessel blew up on the Pacific side of the canal while towing a mud barge. Cause of the explosion was not immediately determined. The chief engineer and five Negro crew members were picked up suffering from shock and bruises.

COMIN' IN ON A FIN AND A PRAYER. Imagine fish distracting one from the musical charm of Henry Daye and his Knights in the Neptune Room and dark-eyed Kay Arden. But in the midst of these colossal melodies came feesh stories! Col. Nat Wallack, expert on radios, records and the public taste (and a bit realistic, not to say cynical, about the whole business) started it off with a yarn about catching a shark with wolf bait and jitter-bug records. Joe Foxx, our contemp from Gaudalcanal, told of garnering tons of fish with hand grenades. Somebody else sprung a yarn about Alaskan citizens having to pitchfork fish off the beach after a cyclonic storm. Then —came the maestro of tall yarns —Frank Romer, Neptune Room's cunning tub-thumper, with the story of a fisherman who'd pulled up a 5-gallon gas tin—and found therein a 3-pound catfish. The idea was that the catfish had swum in there as an infant, fattened so fast that he couldn't get out. Romer has a picture of the gas tin as proof.—P. S. Henry Daye's music has charm and zest, especially when he goes to work on the clarinet. Pianist Kay Arden is lovely and dexterous. She caught a devoted boy friend (blonde, aged 4) during her first number. He wanted to talk on the mike with her.

Peter Chan, headlining it at the Lotus, is an expert on public taste. We groaned inwardly but each of his tunes was greeted with heavy applause. The only answer is that Pete knows his corn as well as his chow mein.

BABY'S CHAMPAGNE PARTY. Launched like a victory ship, with plenty of bubbles, was Walter Schrott, jr., husky and handsome baby son of Maitre d'Hotel Schrott of the Hamilton Hotel. L'il Walter was christened in the morning, tossed a champagne party in the afternoon, showed himself a perfect host by sleeping through the whole business, wakening only for a fleeting baby smile.

OF THIS WAR AND THE LAST. Julian Richards, owner of the Old New Orleans, was a Marine rifle instructor in World War I. . . . Harris Sachs, handsome young brother of Herbie Sachs, owner of Del Rio, is one of the Navy fliers on the Atlantic sub patrol that has done so much to bring victory nearer. . . . Eddie Chase, who used to play piano in Burt's Trans-Lux and the Pall Mall Room, writes that he's playing in a Navy band up in Alaska. "Johnny Zero" must be their pet tune—in two senses. . . . Singer Donnelly James of the Dubonnet Room is wearing a ring made of a Navy flier's wings. The aviator friend who gave it to him has vanished in the blue Pacific. . . . Jimmy Bright, goodlooking singing drummer of the Lounge Riviera, will soon be in uniform.

Have you an ear for Pan-Americana? Then do bend that ear to Jesus Martinez, new leader-trumpeter at the Copocabana.

HIGH CLASS HATREDS. Paul Kain's apparently amiable crew at Glen Echo is fulla viruses. Joanie Ritter could spit when folks call her on the telephone and say "Guess who?" . . . Sammie Ferro is mad because Washington is losing its cozy atmosphere . . . Pianist Ken Foy despises likker and beer. (But he never mentioned vodka.)

SWEET, BUT NOT ALWAYS LOW. A word wrangling Anchor Room fan writes us—"To have a raft of fun, get a new hold on your life line, set your compass for the Anchor Room and let Georgia and Jerry give you first aid." We always knew those kids were life preservers . . . Myles Hallett's band on the Starlight Roof does an awfully good "So Long, Mary." (Could it have been a hint?) . . . "Siboney," the sire of modern Caribbean tunes, is given the ultimate polish by the Echevarria Trio at Madrillon . . . You'll go off to never-never land in the King Cole Room when Bob Brewer plays "Valse Triste" . . . If you have a happy birthday let Betsy Jones of the Metronome Room sing to you about it. She's the little girl with candles in her eyes!

YOUSE ALL HONGRY? If you order a steak sandwich at Cross-roads—you'll get a steak, thick, wide and deep . . . The fried chicken at Ruby Foo's is all chicken, nary a bone. Brilliant. these Chinese . . . Olmsted's lobsters could all vote in Maine.

Postal Receipts Here Reach New Peaks

July revenues at the city postoffic topped the million-dollar mark for the eleventh consecutive month and a new high for the first seven months of 1943, figures released yesterday by Postmaster Vincent C. Burke disclosed.

Establishing an advance of 16.67 per cent, July revenues totaled $1,143,184.26, compared with $979,841.11 for the same month a year ago.

Revenues in the seven months climbed to $7,614,267.56, as compared with $6,439,486.98 in the like 1942 period, registering a gain of $1,174,780.58 so far this year, Mr. Burke's summary revealed.

July War Spending Billion Off

By the Associated Press

War spending during July fell more than a billion dollars under the June figure, but approximately half of the decline, the Treasury said yesterday, reflects technical bookkeeping adjustments.

The Department gave no reason for the rest of the drop, although recent official statements from other Government quarters have expressed dissatisfaction with production trends.

The daily Treasury statement for July 31, released yesterday, showed income tax receipts for the first month of the new fiscal year of $1,254,934,000 and total receipts of more than $2,007,000,000.

Spending, however, was more than three and a half times that figure, aggregating $7,112,458,704. Of that amount $6,431,596,610 went for war activities, contrasted with $7,469,266,674 in June.

The June figures, the Treasury said, "reflect adjustments of about $500,000,000 made between certain receipt accounts and expenditure accounts, and between the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) expenditure account and the war activities expenditure account.

Income tax receipts during July were the highest on record for any month that did not include a quarterly income tax payment date. Nearly five times the $273,057,000 collected during July of last year, the July, 1943 total included only $19,378,000 paid into the Treasury under pay-as-you-go, which went into effect the first of the month.

War bond sales for July aggregated $889,691,000, up from the $875,499,000 sold in June, but redemptions, too, were less—$138,243,000 against $141,147,000 the previous month.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

You know what:

How come Bill Cox, the charming boy president of the Phillies who whipped out his scout hatchet and gave the ax to Bucky Harris, was able to get his salary raised from $5000 to $25,000, just like that, in a year when there is supposed to be a limit on big pay raises?

POVICH

When the Phillies' board of directors voted to hike Cox's salary 400 per cent, at the subtle suggestion of Mr. Cox, maybe they presumed it was all right with the United States Internal Revenue Bureau. Maybe it is, we don't have much of a legal mind, but it looks like a kick in the pants to the much-publicized Little Steel Formula that limits pay raises to something like 15 per cent.

As one of the club's directors pointed out, stock in the club was bought on the assumption that the Phillies would operate on a tight budget, one of the items being the nominal $5000 salary for Cox, but the brave fellow was unable to prevail.

At the time, Cox was the successful club owner. Bucky Harris had made him one by assembling a winning ball club that fetched such large crowds the Phillies were able to pay off all of their indebtedness with the exception of $5000, by mid-July. When the Phillies slumped, Successful Clubowner Cox fired the guy who put him up there. Charming fellow.

And you know what:

Ball players with a mad on, often threaten to pull the play, but we hadn't seen it in years until little Ellis Clary tried to give Pitcher Denny Galehouse of the Browns the business the other night at Griffith Stadium.

It always starts with a dust-off ball, and that's what precipitated the play the other night—a high, inside fast one that whistled past Clary's chin in the fourth inning and sent him scrambling into the dirt of the batter's box. Galehouse was obviously brushing him back.

When Clary came to bat two innings later, he was still furious. Would he take the only recourse a batter has against a pitcher who aimed one at his head? It was apparent that Clary was trying. Trying to lay down a bunt that would pull the pitcher into his path and then let him have it, with his spikes. But Clary had no luck. He bunted, but his first attempt was so foul there was no play.

Clary didn't give up, though. He bunted the next pitch, but by that time Galehouse, no dope, was on guard. He grabbed up the ball, rushed over to the first base line, met Clary so far up the line that it was impossible for Clary to slide, and then gave Clary the shoulder when Clary tried to give him the hip.

Clary went sprawling on his face ingloriously, far into foul territory beaten at his own game. Still mad, he wanted to fight, but was shooed away. It was interesting, though. That kind of stuff in 1943 is novel. But whenever it was to happen, Griffith Stadium customers knew that fiery little Clary would be the guy involved.

You know what:

The Baltimore Orioles' ownership is still playing the sucker's game, apparently. The other day they sold Ed Kleimans, winner of 19 games at this point of the season, the best pitching record of any hurler in organized baseball, to the Cleveland Indians for $10,000.

On the open market, Kleimans would have brought at least $50,000, perhaps more, but the Orioles found themselves obliged to sell the pitcher to Cleveland for a mere 10 grand, because of the owners' short-sighted policy of ultraconservatism.

For the past two years, the Orioles, in an effort to guard against serious financial losses, have promised to deliver two players to Cleveland at a $10,000 purchase price. With that 20 grand, the club could cushion any financial reverses. But actually the Baltimore Club has tossed out of the window some fancy profits. There would have been some terrific bidding for Kleimans.

There was a similar case last year. The Orioles had Eddie Robinson, a first baseman who was called the best player in the minors. The Yankees would have paid at least $60,000 for Robinson, but Baltimore was forced to deliver him to Cleveland for $10,000 under the same arrangement. Is that smart?

Nats Win, 7-4 and 3-0, for Seven Straight

Plenty of Beef (No Ration Points) Followed This Play Last Night

Early Wynn, whose bat and arm helped beat the Browns in the opener, is shown after he slid across the plate in the eighth inning with the run that broke a 4-4 tie. The catcher is Rick Farrell and the umpire, signalling "safe" is Mr. Grieve. Pitcher Bobo Newsom, Manager Luke Sewell and other Browns joined Farrell in his protest of the decision. The Nats won this one, 7-4.

Newsom Hit Hard; Finale To Candini

Griffs Regain Second; Priddy Hits Homer; Spence Star at Bat; Browns Drop 7th

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

By twilight and arc-light the Nats boosted their winning streak last night to the new boastful proportions of seven straight as they pasted the poor old Browns, 7-4 and 3-0 before 18,480 fans, who watched the St. Louis losing streak reach like proportions.

The twin victory vaulted the Nats into second place ahead of the idle White Sox.

It was a big night for two Nats who shook respective pitching and batting slumps, Milo Candini, who tossed a neat four-hit shutout in the nightcap, and Stan Spence, who showed seven solid base hits in eight times at bat.

Candini finally won his eighth game, keeping third base unoccupied after Don Gutteridge, the first Brownie, died there. The fast-balling Milo fanned five, was terrific with men on base and had the help of two late double plays and another of Spence's sensational catches in center field.

Gerry Priddy's first out-of-the-park homer of the year with Gene Moore on base in the sixth gave Candini two insurance runs.

Tony Giuliani, who has performed magnificently behind the plate and at bat in the streak, batted in the first run in the fifth with a single, scoring Spence. The Nats loaded the sacks with none out in the same inning, but scored only one run, a double-play hurting.

Bob Muncrief, who pitched six innings Sunday, was the victim of all Washington runs.

Newsom was quarreling with Umpire in Chief Bill Grieve throughout the twilight engagement, in which he failed to hold on to a 3-1 lead he carried into the last of the sixth inning.

Differing constantly with Grieve on ball-and-strike decisions, and gestures, the perspiring Bobo hit a peak of indignation in the eighth when Grieve called Wynn safe at

Indians Break Tie With Sox, Winning, 11-9

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 3.—The Cleveland Indians and Boston Red Sox struggling to break a fifth-place tie in the American League standing, staged a slugging bee today with the Indians emerging victors, 11-9.

At the end of six innings Cleveland had the Sox down 8-0 and apparently were coasting home, but the Sox finally got to Jim Bagby to score nine times in the last three frames. Allie Reynolds relieved the faltering Bagby, forcing Tony Lupien to pop out to end the game.

Cleveland sluggers blasted out three home runs, two of them being contributed by Ken Keltner. Buddy Rosar clouted the other four-bagger after Keltner had lined his first one out of the park in the second inning.

Emmett O'Neill, who just joined the Sox up from Louisville, fanned Pat Seerey, first batter he faced, and in the eighth inning he blasted out a double in his initial appearance at the plate. Skeeter Newsome chased O'Neill over with his first home run of the season.

Jockey Gross Barred at Suffolk

Boston, Aug. 3 (AP).—Jockey Earl Gross was ordered suspended for the remainder of the meeting today by Suffolk Downs stewards and a recommendation was sent to the State racing commission that the suspension be continued for the rest of the year.

The stewards announced that Gross had been adjudged guilty of grabbing apprentice Herb Pratt during the running of the first race. Gross had the mount on Burnt Bridges, loser by a head to Key Largo, which Pratt was riding.

Indians' Ken Keltner Has 7-Pound Heir

Milwaukee, Aug. 3 (AP).—A 7-pound boy was born today to Mrs. Kenneth Keltner, wife of the Cleveland Indian third baseman, in a Milwaukee hospital. He is the Keltners' second boy. Their other son is 3 years old.

Area 17 Wins Track Meet

Area 17, comprising Langdon, Logan and Lovejoy playgrounds, took top honors in the annual City Championship track and field meet at Banneker Recreation Center yesterday with 102 points. Area 11-A was second with 90 points. Langdon Recreation Center piled up 56 points to win the individual playground championship, topping Banneker Center, which garnered 48 points.

Pitcher Bill Lee, Chicubs' Star, Traded to Phillies

Chicago, Aug. 3 (AP).—Pitcher Bill Lee of the Chicago Cubs, who pitched them to the 1938 National League championship, was traded today to the Philadelphia Nationals in exchange for Catcher Thomas Livingston.

LEE

Lee, who has been with the Cubs for ten years, also was a mainstay in the Cubs' stretch pennant drive in 1935.

In the 1938 pennant campaign, Lee, together with Clay Bryant, pitched almost every other day in the closing days of the race.

This season Lee has been ineffective, wining three out of ten starts, and has been unable to compete with the younger pitchers on the Cubs' staff. Lee's home is in Plaquemine, La.

Braves Take Series, Beat Pirates, 6 to 1

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 3.—The veteran Nate Andrews hurled a fine five-hitter today to beat the second-place Pittsburgh Pirates 6 to 1 and give the Boston Braves a three-to-two edge in their five-game series.

The Braves touched Xavier Rescigno for a pair of hits and a run in the first inning and routed him in the sixth with a five-run barrage that brought Johnny Podgajny into the game for a futile rescue act.

Rip Sewell Fined $50; Ousted Again

Pittsburgh, Aug. 3 (AP).—National League President Ford C. Frick today fined Pitcher Rip Sewell of the Pirates $50 for failing to leave the dugout immediately when ordered to do so by Umpire Lou Jorda during last night's Boston-Pittsburgh game.

Sewell again was ordered from the Pirate bench today, even before the game got under way, evidently for protesting too loudly about the fine.

Cards Shell Macon, Beat Dodgers, 7-4

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 3.—The St. Louis Cardinals, bombing Max Macon out of the box with five first-inning runs, coasted to a 7 to 4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers tonight before a near capacity crowd of 29,638. Big Mort Cooper, the Cardinals' ace pitcher, notched his fifteenth triumph of the campaign.

The victory gave the Cardinals a clean sweep of the four-game series.

Brooklyn Manager Leo Durocher was banished by Umpire Al Barlick in the fourth inning, apparently for riding the umpires.

Yanks Win 2d, 12-4, After Losing 1st, 4-0

Keller's 2 Homers Pace Champs' 16-Hit Attack; Held to 3 Singles in Opener

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 3.—For one half of a double-header today, the Yankees couldn't get a man past first base. Then they made an extra-base parade out of it the rest of the way and split the twin bill with the Detroit Tigers.

Virgil (Fire) Trucks and Little Lefty Roy Henshaw, who took over when Trucks pulled an arm muscle in the sixth inning, combined on a fancy three-hitter to blank the Yanks, 4 to 0, in the opener. In the afterpiece, the Bombers knocked the roof in with 16 hits, including two homers by Charley Keller, and coasted in with a 12-to-4 decision.

Bonham Loses Fifth

The Tigers tagged Ernie Bonham with his fifth loss of the year against 10 wins in the first game and put it on ice in a hurry with a pair of second-inning runs of singles by Pinky Higgins and Paul Richards and Don Ross' double. Although Trucks was unable to finish, he was credited with his second victory over the Yanks in four days, as he and Henshaw, backed up by some fancy fielding, didn't let a runner reach second base.

Lefty Hal Newhouser, who was supposed to be shipped home for a rest but couldn't make the trip because of transportation difficulties, started the nightcap for Detroit but lasted less than three innings.

Keller Brings in Four Runs

Keller's homers, his sixteenth and seventeenth of the year, accounted for four runs and a single gave King Kong another run batted in. Rollie Hemsley hit two doubles and a single and knocked home four runs and Nick Etten also collected a pair of two-beggers. Meantime, Bill Zuber served up a seven-hitter and had an easy time of it after his mates tallied five runs in the first three innings.

Pitcher Ridde Makes 1st Error

Cincinnati, Aug. 3.—The longest errorless run by a pitcher in big league history came to an end today when Elmer Riddle of the Cincinnati Reds was guilty of his first fumble since he broke into the big time in 1939.

The bobble came in the third inning of today's game with the Giants when Riddle, fielding Harry Feldman's bunt and trying for a force of Billy Jurges at second, threw wide past Shortstop Eddie Miller.

It was Riddle's 102d major league game, and his string of 101 without an error far surpasses the previous big league record of 88 chalked up by Ted Lyons of the Chicago White Sox from August 11, 1934, to June 12, 1938.

Boston U. Drops Grid Program

Boston, Aug. 3 (AP).—With all of last year's varsity team in the armed forces, Boston University announced today it would drop football from its 1943-44 sports program.

Dr. John R. Harmon, director of athletics, said a survey of the manpower prospects for this fall indicated it would be impossible to field a team this year.

In addition to the team, Head Coach Walter Holmer and his assistant, Russell Peterson, both joined the Navy last spring, and now are instructors at the Navy's Pre-Flight School at Chapel Hill, N. C.

Cocopet, $900 Colt, Triumphs in Saratoga Sales Stakes

Rodney Stone 2d; Stir Up Finishes 3d

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Aug. 3.—The Lazy F. Ranch's Cocopet, the bargain buy of the five starters, easily captured the Saratoga Sales Stakes, for 2-year-olds sold as yearlings at the Spa auctions the previous year, before 14,443 fans here this afternoon. The winner, which cost only $900, boosted her total earnings to $21,375.

Lone filly in the dash down the Widener straightaway and favorite at $3.30 for $2, the dark gray daughter of Jacopo-Madam Capet took the $4275 first away by three lengths. Her time of 1:04 1/5 for the 5½ furlongs equaled the best time of the meeting for the distance.

Harry La Montagne's Rodney Stone, the most expensive buy in the field at $5100, earned the place by a nose. He has now earned $4175. Greentree's $3800 acquisition, Stir Up, finished third in front of Ariel Game ($1700) and Spheric ($2000).

Conn McCreary was astride Cocopet for his second straight success in the Sales Stakes, he having booted Devil's Thumb to victory in the twenty-first running of the event last year. It was Cocopet's fifth triumph in seven starts and her second stakes conquest. She recently won the Mayflower at Suffolk Downs.

Cocopet assumed a narrow lead over Stir Up and Rodney Stone soon after a good start. It was a close battle to the last furlong, where the favorite drew clear with ease, increasing her advantage as she approached the finish. Rodney Stone barely wore down Stir Up for the place.

Mask Wrestles Yourist Tonight In Grudge Match

The Mask, who is gradually proving one of the best hooded grapplers ever to show at Turner's Arena, will resume his feud with Abe Yourist, the big New Yorker, in a finish bout tonight at Turner's Arena.

Although The Mask was given the match in a 30-minute bout last week, Yourist thought the referee acted a little too fast. He asked for a rematch over the longer route, and the feature spot was granted him.

Chief Thunderbird, British Columbia Indian, comes back for the third straight week, this time to engage Big Ben Morgan, rough, bearded grappler, in a 45-minute bout. Supporting bouts, the first starting at 8:45, find Maurice LaChappelle against John Vansky, Johnny Long against Michele Leone and Dick Lever against John Winthrop.

N.B.A. Orders More Battles For Champions

The National Boxing Association announced yesterday that for the duration of the war it would require fight champions not in the armed services to defend their titles at least once every three months against logical contenders, the Associated Press reported.

N. B. A. heretofore has required a championship defense every six months. The new rule, association officials said, "is intended to increase interest in boxing."

The ruling will affect Jackie Callura, featherweight champion; Manuel Ortiz, bantamweight king, and Little Dado, flyweight titleholder. Champions serving in the armed forces whose titles are "frozen" for the duration include Heavyweight Joe Louis, Light Heavyweight Gus Lesnevich, Middleweight Tony Zale and Welterweight Freddie Cochrane.

N. B. A. has refused to recognize Bob Montgomery of Philadelphia as lightweight king, although he has been awarded the crown in New York State. N. B. A. insists that Montgomery must defeat Sammy Angott to obtain title recognition.

Lewis Presses Portal Pay Before WLB

this board has never been able to render a decision on the basis of the record as to any right of the mine workers to portal-to-portal travel time to correct a working condition problem in the mines."

Lewis had previously defied the board, which he denounced as a "packed court against labor," by refusing to answer repeated summons to appear at hearings on the case. He appeared voluntarily this time—although the Connally-Smith Act giving the board statutory authority and the power of subpena was passed since the last defiance.

Suits Contemplated

Lewis' attorney, Crampton Harris, said the miners had prepared to institute suit for "portal-to-portal" pay throughout the country before the Illinois agreement was signed, but held off after it was completed.

Harris predicted he would be able to recover four times the amount provided under the contract in court, but pointed out court proceedings might drag out over months or even years.

Employment of Harris, who won a "portal to portal" case for C. I. O. Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers iron ore miners in the Federal District Court at Birmingham, Ala., was something of a surprise, but a U. M. W. spokesman stated Harris had worked for the U. M. W. on several previous occasions.

Lewis sat placidly throughout most of the hearing without expressing himself. He rose to speak only after his attorney had made necessary technical explanations—to make an impassioned plea for the miners.

The hearing was marked by none of the angry outbursts that have characterized other WLB hearings involving potentially defiant unions or corporations.

Lewis told the board American miners are the "only mine workers in any civilized country who do not receive compensation for travel time at each end of the shift." He stated many miners would be under ground 57 hours a week if the proposed contract calling for a 48-hour, six-day work week is approved.

2 A. F. of L. Members Back Lewis' Request

The two American Federation of Labor members of the War Labor Board—George Meany, A. F. of L. secretary-treasurer, and Matthew Woll, vice president—yesterday came vigorously to the defense of the United Mine Workers at the WLB hearing on coal wages, indicating anew that the U. M. W. headed by John L. Lewis, appears on the way back to the federation.

Lewis' application for readmission to the federation comes up for consideration at the quarterly meeting of the A. F. of L. executive board next week in Chicago.

2000 Capital Carpenters Called Jobless

Approximately 2000 District of Columbia carpenters are idle because of shortage of building materials, labor authorities announced yesterday.

Authorization by Federal agencies for additional construction materials is the only way to adjust the problem, it was said.

B. B. Blackburn, secretary-treasurer of the District council office of the Carpenters' and Joiners' Union, the Carpenters and Joiners Union, had three men in the field trying to correct the condition, but their combined efforts had not proved enough to offset the surplus of carpenters here.

Fred Z. Hetzel, WMC area director, said he was aware of the situation and that while there were 124 openings for carpenters listed at the United States Employment Office here, all of them were nonunion projects paying from $1 to $1.12 cents an hour.

Union carpenters are paid on the basis of $1.62½ an hour.

"These men are skilled workers," Hetzel said, "and could hardly be expected to do unskilled labor."

K. Vernon Banta, USES director, said that whenever orders for union carpenters came in, the District council office of the Carpenters and Joiners Union is notified at once and workers are supplied immediately.

In the meantime, Blackburn said, the number of carpenters in the District is double that of normal times. He estimated there are 10,000 carpenters here.

"We have been accepting carpenters for out-of-town work whenever we can place them," Banta explained, "but that apparently does not solve the problem."

Without Painful Backache

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Doughton Hints Move for Individual Ecess Profits Tax

and living conditions subject them to special burdens."

The North Carolinian stressed that this did not mean the two were in complete accord "as to the amount of revenue to be sought." He said that was a matter the full committee would have to decide.

The broad hint that his committee will seriously consider an excess profits tax for individuals was contained in two "considerations" mentioned by Doughton as more "vitally important" than ever before.

Doughton's points:

"1. I believe that the new revenue bill should be a program to do two things: to raise revenue and to combat inflation. It should be more than just a revenue-raising bill.

"2. The burden of any tax or anti-inflation proposal should be as equitably distributed as possible, not only between upper and lower income groups, but by recognizing that in any income group there may be people who need to be protected against the full impact of tax increases."

Under questioning by reporters, Doughton said he meant that people with fixed incomes whose earnings have not risen as have many in war industries and elsewhere, are the group that needs tax protection.

An excess profits tax for individuals, first tried out in World War I when it ran into administrative difficulties, theoretically would progressively hit those whose incomes have gone up since the war and safeguard individuals who have no war "excess" earnings.

Both the Treasury, and experts of the Congressional Joint Committee of Internal Revenue headed by Colin F. Stam, are under Ways and Means Committee instructions "to study and report on the feasibility of raising additional revenue by means of an individual excess-profits tax."

Doughton's failure to reach an agreement with Morgenthau on the amount of revenue to be raised recalled Senate Finance Committee Chairman George's Sunday forecast that Congress will raise only half of the 12 billion dollars originally estimated by the Treasury.

Doughton said he was "encouraged" by the result of his talk with Morgenthau. Reporters did not learn until later that he had quietly conferred with Vinson as well.

Woman Burned Severely

Margaret Millington, 29, was burned severely yesterday when cleaning fluid she was using to remove paint from clothes in the basement of 4929 Rosedale Avenue, Bethesda, Md., was ignited by a pilot light on a water heater.

The woman, who resides in a trailer nearby was seriously burned on the legs and arms. She was taken to Georgetown Hospital by the Bethesda Rescue Squad.

British Batter Hamburg Again

holm quoted a Danish worker from Hamburg as saying of the city:

"I saw only ruins. The city was burning everywhere — even the streets. Many persons were as good as naked. Whoever didn't see this devastation can't begin to imagine it. Bodies were lying everywhere. They died from air pressure of giant bombs and their clothes were torn from their bodies."

The German communique acknowledged civilian casualties and "considerable destruction."

Aftonbladet said the Hamburg raids had caused more consternation in Berlin than any other events in the war and had precipitated an ordered evacuation of Berlin. Nights now are lengthening 30 minutes a week, thus widening the range from new obliteration raids. Hamburg lies only 150 miles northwest of Berlin, half an hour as the bombers fly.

Detective Testifies Against de Marigny in Oakes Murder

estate, Westbourne.

"There had been considerable fire in the room," he continued, describing the scene when he and Melchen were ushered into the death chamber.

"Sir Harry's body lay, in a semi-contracted position, on a twin bed.

"It was badly burned, especially on the left side and on the legs and face. Some of the burns were there before Sir Harry died."

"Anyone in that room at the time of the fire would have suffered burned hairs," he continued. "We first examined Mr. Christie. He had no burned hairs or tissues. Then Mr. de Marigny volunteered to undergo a microscopic examination and removed his shirt.

"We examined thruogh the microscope the bank of his fingers, his hands and forearms, and found on both hands and both arms a considerable quantity of hair burns. The hairs were cured and some had been destroyed by the heat. The examination also disclosed burned hairs in his mustache, his beard, his eyebrows and his head, although to a lesser degree than on his arms."

At various times, Barker said, De Marigny said he incurred the burns scalding chickens at his chicken yard, lightnig four hurricane lamps at his home, and by having a singe at a barber shop.

Barker exhibited a screen which was near Sir Harry's bed during the attack.

"We located many prints on the screen, most of them illegible," the detective continued. "One proved to be conclusively an impression of the right little finger of Alfred de Marigny."

Barker said De Marigny told of wearing a tan shirt and trousers and sports shoes the night of the slaying.

"When we searched his home," he continued, "we failed to locate any material or instrument helpful to the case except the clothing he reported he wore the night of July 7.

"The shirt was missing. De Marigny could not identify any of the shirts found in soiled clothes containers as the one he wore.

"'I cannot find it,' he told us."

So now, more than ever, ask yourself:

IS MY TRIP NECESSARY?

If the answer is "yes"... please remember that you may have to stand

Travel is almost 4 TIMES as heavy as in 1939, yet the railroads have nowhere near the equipment to accommodate it comfortably that they had in that year.

That is because half the Pullmans—and at least a third the coaches—are now on the go day and night moving troops.

So if travel is not all that you or we would like it to be, please bear in mind that never before in railroad history has so little equipment had to serve so many. If there's no Pullman space available, take the coach. If all coach seats are occupied you'll have to stand.

To make things easier for yourself—and for the railroads—the suggestion is made that whenever it is necessary for you to travel, try to plan your trip for days of the week when travel is not quite so heavy. As a rule, these days are Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday. Above all, avoid weekends—that's when furlough travel is exceptionally heavy.

Your thoughtfulness will help us do our best for all who must travel, while keeping the wheels turning for Uncle Sam—our No. 1 job

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutts

War Department May Lay Off 3000

War Department is planning a big lay-off of civilian personnel. One official predicted the number would be "around 3000." Another said it would reach 4000. Hundreds of dismissal notices will be distributed on August 15. Ample notice will be given all employe-s separated to give them time to find jobs elsewhere. In fact, the Office of the Fiscal Director already has given notices to 367 employes, which is about a 15 per cent cut of its 2500-man staff. Employes in the Fiscal Director already has given notices to 367 employes, which is about a 15 per cent cut of its 2500 man staff. Employes in the Fiscal Office were given 30 days' notice after which they can go on annual leave. However, many will take leave during August to hunt other jobs.

The reduction orders, it's reliably reported, will hit just about every office in the War Department. Army Service Forces will bear the deepest slash but ASF is by far the largest branch in the department. Adjutant General's Office, it's said, will take the biggest cut. AGO is within ASF. The Signal Corps, Chemical Warfare, Engineers, Quartermaster, Surgeon General, Transportation, and Ordnance Divisions also will feel the ax. The Air Corps, it was reported, won't be hit as hard as the old-line services. The personnel slashes were ordered by the Gasser Manpower Board which was set up by Secretary Stimson to bring about more efficient use of Army manpower, both civilian and military. The board also has ordered a substantial cut in the number of officers on duty here.

Dismissal notices, it's believed, will follow along the general line of those issued by the Office of the Fiscal Director. The employes will be cut off in this order: (1) temporary employes will be the first to go; (2) next on the list will be war service employes who haven't served their probationary periods, usually a year, but some probationary periods run for six months; (3) war service appointees who have served their probationary periods will be next (anyone appointed after March 16, 1942, is a war service appointee), and (4) permanent employes will be the last to be touched, employes who were appointed before March 16, 1942. Very few permanent employes will be let out. However, some with poor efficiency ratings will be cut off.

Ratings Will Count

Efficiency ratings, incidentally, will be an important factor in making up the list of employes to be dismissed. Efficiency ratings, in fact, are the base used in making many separations. Seniority will amount to little as the ax will hit temporaries, and war service appointees mainly. However, length of service will count for persons who have years of service behind them and who lost their permanent status temporarily and transferred to War as "war service appointees." In reductions of force, these people will be given protection. Veterans, of course, will be given preference. Persons who believe the civil service rules on veterans preference, efficiency ratings, and length of service are violated in making their dismissals can appeal to the Civil Service Commission.

The pending lay-offs bring to mind a prediction made by Lieut. General Somervell six weeks ago before the Ramspeck Civil Service Investigating Committee. The general was told of complaints received by Congressmen from War Department employes who said they didn't have enough work. Somervell predicted members soon would be hearing complaints from employes who were separated. In times past when employes were layed off in one division another office would be trying frantically to hire additional people. War officials promise this mistake won't be repeated. They say some of the people cut off undoubtedly will be reinstated to fill vacancies that'll occur after September. Moreover, some of the bureaus will arrange to transfer some of the employes to the field but they say the cut must be made to bring about more economical operation of the department.

Edward Prichard, the 27-year-old aide to Economic Stabilizer Vinson and Assistant President Byrnes, will be inducted into the Army on August 18. He was 4-F up until he was reclassified. And Ed could have been deferred but he wouldn't consider it for a moment . . . The Government Girl Club will meet tonight in the parish hall of St. John's Episcopal Church, 821 Sixteenth Street Northwest. An important project will be discussed and a full attendance is urged . . . Francis O. Wilcox, formerly the Office of Civilian Defense and the Rockefeller agency, has joined the Budget Bureau staff.

The fiscal functions of the old Office of Emergency Management have been divided between WPB and OPA. . . . Civil Service Commission has established a new office to assist war veterans get Federal jobs. The chief is Charles Anderson, who headed up the appeals board . . . Civil Service needs printing experts . . . Get in your guest columns by a week from today, August 10. Authors of columns used during my vacation will get $10 each. Make them around 800 words.

5 Restaurant Owners Lose Collateral

Judge McMahon Ends Nielson Policy Of Forcing Food Dealers Into Court

Judge John P. McMahon in Municipal Court allowed five restaurant owners and two grocery store operators to forfeit collateral on charges of permitting insanitary conditions. This ended for the time being the policy of Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court in forcing food dealers to appear in court, where they may face heavy penalties.

Judge McMahon, questioned on why he disregarded Judge Neilson's policy, said that the Health Department had not requested attachments which would require court appearance of accused dealers. Judge McMahon began a month's term yesterday in the District branch of the court, while Judge Neilson was shifted to jury court.

Judge McMahon said, however, that he would "act on the suggestion of the Health Department if it should request attachments."

David Permutter, operator of the New Western Lunch, Inc. of 943 Eighth Street Northwest, forfeited $25 collateral when he failed to appear to answer charges of having "dirty refrigerators, work tables, counters, basement littered with refuse, dogs in basement, foul odors, no proper garbage containers."

George Nicholson, operator of a restaurant at 1257 Ninth Street Northwest, forfeited $25 collateral when he did not appear to answer charges of having a dirty range and hood, shelves, floor, toilet, shed and yard.

Simon Einwohner, restaurateur at 1342 Seventh Street Northwest, forfeited $50. He was charged with having drinking utensils not properly sterilized before public use.

Terry Gregory, restaurateur at 2632 Fourteenth Street Northwest, forfeited $25 on allowing unclean drinking utensils.

Mary F. Nichols, restaurateur at 10 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, forfeited $25 on having unclean drinking utensils charge.

Harry Clayman, 1469 P Street Northwest, grocer, forfeited $25. He was charged with allowing flies on meat in ice box, bad odors, sour pork sausage, trash, junk, and evidence of rats in yard, dirty meat grinders, etc.

Charles Hillman, 2016 Fourteenth Street Northwest, grocer, forfeited $25. He was charged with having blow flies in show windows, rotten beets in vegetable bin, fish without ice, bad odors, trash, and meat scraps in rear of store room.

John Knox Arnold Retired Employe of FTC, Dies on Coast

John Knox Arnold, 61, an employe of the Federal Trade Commission until his retirement five years ago, died Friday in El Centro, Calif., his family announced yesterday.

Mr. Arnold, a native of Kentucky, received his education at Washington and Lee University and George Washington University and was with the economic division of the Federal Trade Commission for 30 years. He is survived by his wife, who lives at 713 M Street Northwest, and three sons, Lieut. Col. John K. Arnold, jr., Army Air Forces; Robert D. Arnold, a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Scott Arnold, who lives with his mother here. Funeral arrangements had not been completed yesterday.

City News In Brief

Coast Guard to Dance

Highlighted with professional entertainment, the United States Coast Guard will stage its first dance Saturday at 9 p. m. in Hotel Statler's Congressional Room, under auspices of newly formed Recreational Association of the Service Branch. Music will be by Jack King's Orchestra.

Old Law Ruled Obsolete

Dismissing a charge against Mrs. Katy Chamberlain, Negro, 807 R Street Northwest, Judge John P. McMahon of Municipal Court yesterday ruled a 72-year-old District ordinance making it a misdemeanor to interfere with health officers on duty was obsolete.

The ordinance, enacted in 1871, was intended to safeguard inspectors of the then tough fish wharf area, Judge McMahon said. He suggested persons accused of the offense might better be tried on other charges.

Woman Forfeits $10

Charged with disorderly conduct in what appeared to be a sit-down strike in front of the United States Employment Service office at 501 K Street, on Saturday afternoon, a woman who gave her name as Bonar Belmoth of New York, forfeited $10 yesterday in Municipal Court.

Siberian Singers to Present Folk Songs at Meridian Hill

The Siberian Singers as they appear in their cathedral robes

The Siberian Singers, all-male Russian chorus under the direction of Nicholas Vasilieff, will present the history of their country in stirring songs from ancient folk legends through the martial tunes of the modern Red army in The Post series of Starlight Concerts Saturday and Sunday nights at Meridian Hill Park.

The Saturday night program will open with Tchaikovsky's "Prayer for Russia" which the singers have selected because of its present day appropriateness as the Russians fight for their country against Nazi invaders. The Siberian Singers are particularly qualified to sing this type of song and other liturgical music because all of them were soloists at the famous St. Alexander Cathedral in St. Petersburg in Russia before coming to this country.

Folk Songs on Program

Other songs in the first part of the program will include "Hallelujah," an old church chant; "Divine Praise" by Bortniansky, and "Behold, Bless Ye the Lord," by Ippolitoff-Ivanoff.

The second part of the program Saturday night will include folk songs that portray the spirit of Russia—a soldier's song, a description of the women, and a ballad entitled "Kanavka."

The final selections will include rousing Red army songs including "My Country," "Tachanka," "Song of the Plains" and "Tari Bari."

Sunday night the Siberian Singers will open with "Repentance" by Lvoff. Other religious selections will include "Bless the Lord, Oh My Soul," by Ippolitoff-Ivanoff; "Song at Eventide," by Rimsky-Korsakoff, and "Lord Have Mercy" by Lvoffsky.

U. S. Employes Guests

Folf songs on the Sunday night program will include ballads of the Volga River, merchants, young army recruits and a Russian polka. The concluding part of the concert will be made up of gypsy songs entitled "Gypsy Tabor," "What Do I Care," "Gypsy Driver," and "Old Refrain."

Two hundred employes of the Commerce Department have been given complimentary tickets to attend the Saturday night concert as guests of The Post. Sunday night the special guests at the concert will be workers of the Federal Works Agency.

The Washington Post is sponsoring the concerts to give the Capital's warworkers opportunity to enjoy music under the stars in a rustic setting designed along the lines of an old-world garden. Servicemen and women in uniform will be admitted free to the unreserved section. Tickets may be purchased for 55 cents, $1.10 and $1.65 at Cappel Concert Bureau, 1340 G Street Northwest, and at the park boxoffice.

Victory Sidelights

OCD to Show New Tactics In Fighting Incendiary Bombs

New tactics in fighting incendiary bombs, of the high explosive type used by the Nazis in recent raids, will be demonstrated by a "Flying Bomb" squad under the direction of William G. Sweetman, chemical warfare instructor, during the two-week recruiting period in which 20,000 additional civilian defense workers are sought.

At the present time three demonstrations are planned: On August 8, at 8 p. m., in the parking lot at Wisconsin Avenue and River Road Northwest; August 8, at 7 p. m., in the McKinley High School stadium. Second and T Streets Northeast, and August 11 at 7:30 p. m. at Twenty-second and P Streets Northwest.

Preceding the bomb demonstrations an explanatory talk will be given by Sweetman. To make the demonstration more realistic OCD officials said that temporary structures will be erected and then be destroyed by incendiaries.

Chapter Resignations

Mrs. John E. Ewell, chairman, and three other officers of the Gray Ladies of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross have resigned, it was announced yesterday.

The others are Mrs. O. C. Holleran, Mrs. Atherton Macondray and Mrs. William Chandler, all vice chairmen.

5419 Vacation Requests

Washingtonians who have received permission to use their A gasoline ration cards for vacation purposes total 5419, it was announced by OPA yesterday.

Baltimore issued permits to 8488 during the same period, from July 15 through July 30. Vacation permits will continue to be issued here where warranted, it was said.

Pleasure Car Penalties

Five more Washingtonians have been penalized for violations of the pleasure-driving ban, OPA announced yesterday.

Those found guilty and their penalties were Samuel G. McFadden, 1110 Fourth Street Northwest, supplemental ration book suspended 15 days; Wallace Davis, 471 Florida Avenue Northwest, four B coupons taken up; James W. Santmeyer, 1317 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, one A coupon recalled, and Thomas Torrance, 409 Sixth Street Southeast, one B coupon canceled.

Draft Charge Dismissed

Thomas Lee View, 30, Negro, a building laborer, has been acquitted, by a District Court jury of charges of failing to submit a supplementary questionnair and failure to keep his draft board informed of his whereabouts in violation of Selective Training and Service Act.

The first charge was voided by the court which directed a not guilty verdict, the jury deciding the second after View's attorney, Sandolphra Robins, had shown View had done everything in his power to notify his draft board of his location.

Restaurants Prices Face Stiff Scrutiny

OPA Warns Cafe Operators Against Any Practices to Evade Rollback

Restaurant operators were warned last night not to attempt evasion of OPA's price rollback regulations by substituting inferior foods and charging prices for them that are maximums for superior menu offerings.

The warning came from John L. Laskey, OPA chief attorney and enforcement division head, in explaining details of the price rollback to District restaurant and drinking establishment owners and operators meeting in the Chamber of Commerce.

To inmplement enforcement of prices in effect between the April 4 and 10 period to which prices were rolled back by the regulation and made basic last week price panel assistants would make periodic checks on places of business, Laskey said. He warned that differences between rollback maximums and current prices would require explanation, and repeated failure to comply with the price rollback would result in Federal action or license revocation.

Under the new regulation, Laskey explained, operators of eating and drinking places cannot increase meal ticket prices, increase cover charges or discontinue no-tipping rules without a compensating decrease in prices charged, and are not permitted to change set prices without OPA approval.

Operators who feel they cannot stay in business at rollback price maximums will be required to file profit and loss statements to justify requests for price increases, it was explained.

Those planning to open restaurants were told they would have to establish prices in line with nearest competitors with the same class of service.

In substance, public effect of the rollback regulation is the knowledge that whatever you paid for a meal in a favorite restaurant between April 4 and 10, is what you should be paying now. If it is more the operator has explanations to make to OPA.

Clark Wins Nomination To Va. Senate

Andrew W. Clark of Alexandria was named the Democratic nominee for senator to the State Legislature from the newly created Twenty-ninth Senatorial District in Northern Virginia, in the Virginia primaries yesterday.

Complete returns from Alexandria, 21 precincts out of 25 of Fairfax and nearly complete returns from Prince William County gave Clark a total of 3198 votes against his nearest opponent, Charles H. Smith, also of Alexandria, who polled 1879. George W. Herring of Prince William received 1606 votes and Richard M. Smith of McLean got 784.

W. Selden Washington, collateral descendant of George Washington, won easily over Marion B. West for the nomination to the State House of Delegates from Alexandria. Washington polled 2016 against West's 1499 and 347 for Ernest L. Mankin.

Lieut. Walter H. Scott, U. S. N. R., was defeated in his bid for renomination to the House from Roanoke, the Associated Press reported. Scott was defeated by Roanoke's mayor, Walter W. Wood, in a three-cornered contest. Delegate Earl Fitzpatrick, the other candidate, received 2017 votes, to 1620 for Wood and 1528 for Scott.

Mrs. Nellie C. Fletcher, who fought so hard for restoration of the Washington & Old Dominion Railway, was defeated almost 2 to 1 in her efforts to unseat Howard C. Rogers as Democratic nominee for the House of Delegates from Loudoun County. Howard received 1727 votes against Mrs. Fletcher's 813 with all but the Leesburg district having reported.

Robert J. McCandlish of Falls Church, incumbent delegate from Fairfax County, won easily over Edwin Lynch for the nomination to the Legislature.

Job Pirating Faces Prosecution Here

to increase," Burns continued, "especially in locally needed activities."

Workers in locally needed activities have quit and gone to work for other employers without first obtaining statements of availability authorizing their release.

Employers in essential or locally needed activities have hired them without regard to the provisions of the plan which prohibits their soliciting or hiring workers from other essential or locally needed activities unless the workers have statements of availability.

The District area plan clothes the area director with authority to instruct the United States Employment Service to refuse to provide workers for companies in violation of the plan. The USES also will be instructed to grant statements of availability freely to employes of companies violating the plan, thus enabling these workers to take jobs with other war employers, even if they ordinarily would not be entitled to releases.

The District stabilization plan recently was amended to require essential and other than essential workers to obtain a record of previous employment from all workers who were last employed in other than essential work.

Many Change Minds

All employers, under this ruling, must have a record of previous employment or a statement of availability before a worker is hired.

Meanwhile, one out of every three workers who applied at USES offices in WMC Region 4 during June to discuss quitting or transferring to other employment decided to stay on the job where they were working, after talking the matter over with WMC personnel, Leo R. Werts, acting regional director, announced.

Region 4 is composed of the District of Columbia area, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and North Carolina.

An aggregate 131,000 persons contacted USES offices in June as a preliminary to obtaining statements of availability permitting them to quit and transfer to other jobs. Of the total number 85,000 filed applications for statements of availability, the survey showed.

Va. Bootleggers Buying Here, Head of ABC Board Believes

Some District liquor retailers undoubtedly are selling whisky to bootleggers for resale in Virginia and West Virginia—and probably are exacting a better price than for legitimate dealings, ABC Chairman Thomas E. Lodge said last night.

Although confident that the volume of such sales is necessarily small, because of the scarcity of liquor for any traffic—legal or illegal—Lodge said that there was little chance for the ABC Board to check up on such traffic.

There is nothing in the ABC regulations that forbids a retailer from selling as much to any one customer as he pleases. Furthermore, the ABC Board is not empowered to bring the bootleggers back into the District to testify against a suspected retailer.

The Board is relying on the local shortage of liquor and the voluntary rationing of liquor among customers by retail dealers to hold down the volume of Washington's "contribution" to the Virginia and West Virginia bootleggers.

Local dealers said that for such commerce to be profitable it would have to be transported in lots of 50 to 100 cases or more, and that no dealer is selling whiskey in such quantities. As a matter of fact many of them limit their sales to one or two quarts per customer.

Lodge said that all dealers are being discouraged from selling even legally to out-of-town customers. Dealers say, however, that it is not altogether easy to tell a District customer from a Virginia customer without inquiring of every purchaser where he lives, and that this custom has not been widely adopted.

Harry Wechsler, president of the Retail Liquor Dealers Association, said that while no set program of rationing had been adopted, the matter had been discussed at several of the association meetings. Most dealers have inaugurated some form of rationing best suited to their circumstances, Wechsler said. Generally, each customer is limited to two bottles of whisky per purchase.

Milstone's Acme, one of the largest "volume" stores, limits the purchase of nationally advertised brands to one bottle, and of other brands to two. Ney's, another volume store, lets a customer buy as much as he likes from the shelves—but puts limited quantities on the shelves at any one time.

Milton S. Kronheim, local wholesaler, found the reports of the $10 prices in Virginia encouraging as an indication that moonshining has not yet become rife.

"A man would hardly pay $10 for a pint of tax-paid whisky when he could buy the moonshine product at a cost far below that," Kronheim said.

Ex-Police Capt. Beall Gets 16 Months to 5 Years in Theft

Capt. Lawrence Raymond Beall, 46, former Metropolitan Police property clerk, was sentenced yesterday by Justice James W. Morris of District Court to serve 16 months to 5 years in jail for embezzlement of $4202 of police funds.

A total of 32 persons were sentenced during the afternoon by Justice Morris. Arraignments of 55 persons were held before him, in closing out the calendar for the spring session of the District Court.

White Slaver Jailed

Other sentences follow:

1. George F. Whitehead, 49, of New York, owner of the Hopkins Institute, Connecticut Avenue vice establishment which operated under the guise of a "massage parlor," was given a 1-to-4-year sentence after pleading guilty to violating the White Slave Traffic Act and conspiracy, in operating the institute.

2. John Eoghan Kelly, 49, of New York and San Francisco, was fined $500 for failing to register as an agent of the Spanish government.

3. Joseph Jack Giasulla, 28, former boxer, was given a 1-to-3-year prison sentence for white slavery in transporting a former burlesque theater dancer from New York to Washington for immoral purposes.

Lottery Violators

4. Jack Grove, of Washington, and four other men of nearby States were sentenced for conspiring to violate the Federal lottery laws in operation of the Chesterfield baseball pool.

Beall disappeared in August, 1942, while a member of the police force. During his absence Major Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, ordered an audit of police funds and discovered the shortage. Beall was arrested three weeks ago in Colorado where he was identified by a boy who recognized a "wanted" poster of the FBI. Attorney R. I. Miller, in pleading for leniency, said that the fear of his family's suffering was punishment enough.

Whitehead pleaded guilty to two indictments. According to Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly, Whitehead owned the Hopkins Institute, said to have been the most lavish house of prostitution in the city. The alleged manager and seven alleged prostitutes are now awaiting trial in District Court on the vice charge.

Kelly's Defense

Kelly, an admitted writer for the Spanish Library of Information, was convicted by a District Court jury. He did many translations of Spanish articles, evidence showed, and was influential in arranging business deals in Spain. It was contended by the prosecution that his articles were definitely pro-Fascist and intended to influence public opinion. Kelly's defense was that he was not writing propaganda and that he believed the library was a domestic organization.

Jack Grove, also known as A. C. High, was given a four-month to a year jail sentence for conspiring to violate the lottery laws. They are Ernest W. Warren, Bristol, Tenn.; Michael Carter, Charlottesville, Va.; Willard W. Reynolds, Staunton, Va.; H. E. Bowman, Baltimore, and Joseph Remeikis, Baltimore.

Cases against five others were nollie prossed.

The tickets for the lottery, based on total scores of major league baseball games, were sold for 50 cents each. Although it operated only during the summer, the United States attorney's office said the lottery had been going for several years.

Third Triplet Quits Incubator; Tiny Demar Baby to Go Home

Joan LaBelle Demar, who weighed in at Columbia Hospital at 1 pound, 11 ounces two months ago, yesterday emerged from her incubator and prepared to join the other two-thirds of the Demar triplets at their home, 336 Sixteenth Street Southeast.

Joan and her sisters, Dorothy Jeanette and Gloria June, are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Demar—and there's more to the family: Benjamin Frederick, 9; David Henry, 7; Donna Marie, 4; and Robert Joseph, who at 17 months has four teeth, lots of hair, and weighs 35 pounds.

The other two triplets, Dorothy and Gloria, have been home for three weeks, while Joan, smallest baby ever born at Columbia Hospital, remained to gain weight and strength in the incubator. She weighed 3 pounds and 3½ ounces.

Dorothy and Gloria, more strapping at birth, weighed 3 pounds, 10 ounces and 3 pounds, 6 ounces, respectively, and now have put on more than a pound each. All three girls together weighed only slightly more when they were born than did Robert, who was a husky 7 pounds, 14 ounces.

The arrival of 27-ounce Joan was reminiscent of the famed Bette Gay Bonbrest, who astonished local doctors 21 months ago by tipping the scales at 26 ounces when she was born in George Washington University Hospital.

Bette Gay is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Bonbrest of 1144 Branch Avenue Southeast. She now weighs 29 pounds.

Daddy Demar, a Postoffice Department employe, was welterweight champion of the Army in the mid-1920's and was District champion of the 26-mile A. A. U. meet in 1935. He and Mrs. Demar, a native of Austria, have lived in Washington for 12 years.

Counselor Cuts Indiana Utility Costs

Savings Started When Minton Held Office Now Total 12 Millions a Year

As a result of recent agitation for appointment of a People's Counsel for the District, The Post has made a survey of the value of People's Counsels in the two States, Maryland and Indiana, where such offices now exist. The following is the first of two articles dealing with the People's Counsel in Indiana.

By Ralph L. Brooks

Special Dispatch to The Post

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 3.—Pending before the Indiana Public Service Commission is an action, instituted by the public counselor, seeking reduced fares for Indianapolis citizens who ride the streetcars, trolley buses and gasoline buses operated by Indianapolis Railways, Inc.

If this action is successful, it will bring to approximately 12 million dollars a year the savings to utility patrons which have been effected in the Hoosier State since the office of public counselor was created in 1933.

The public counselor in Indiana is a unique official. He is the public's full-time utility lawyer; guardian of the public's interests. He represents the public in rate hearings before the Public Service Commission, scrutinizes all petitions from utilities seeking rate increases, authority to abandon service or issue bonds, and acts to protect the public interest in these matters. He appears in the State and Federal courts on behalf of the public in litigation involving utilities.

Starts Proceedings on His Own

As in the pending Indianapolis Railways, Inc., case, the public counselor institutes rate reduction proceedings on his own initiative. And he cooperates with citizens and local governing bodies to secure rate decreases whenever it appears that reductions are due the patrons.

Spectacular results obtained by Indiana's first public counselor, Sherman Minton, skyrocketed him into public favor; sent him to the United States Senate. At the end of his first seven months in office he had obtained rate reductions of more than a million dollars a year for utility patrons.

Minton was successful because he inaugurated a new, revolutionary method of attacking the rate reduction problem. He cut red tape, made possible the elimination of long-drawn-out, expensive rate hearings. He created the "agreed reduction" system.

Whenever he decided that a public utility ought to cut its rates he asked for and obtained conferences with its executives. He told them the ratepayer's side of the story. A give-and-take series of talks would follow, and in a surprisingly short time there would be an agreed order, reducing the rates, issued by the Public Service Commission.

Practically the same thing occurred when patrons filed a rate-reduction petition.

P. S. C. Acts Swiftly

Orders for utility rate reductions came out of the Public Service Commission office in the State House with machine-gun rapidity and block-buster force. And all this naturally captured the public fancy—and why not, when it was saving them thousands and thousands of dollars annually in their utility bills?

As the years rolled on the savings piled up in million and half-million dollar lumps, until today the accumulated savings amount to more than 11 million dollars a year as against the rates which were being paid prior to 1933. Sherman Minton, a New Albany attorney before his appointment as public counselor, has since served in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Chicago. Four other attorney have served as public counselor. The present counselor is Howard T. Batman, a Terre Haute attorney.

None of Minton's successors has equaled his spectacular career in office; but they have steadily added to the accumulation of savings to rate-payers which he started.

Records of the Public Service Commission showed that during his first year in office orders calling for reductions of $3,102,000 were issued, including a cut of $250,000 a year in the bill of patrons of the Indianapolis Power & Light Co.

Minton Overshadows All

More recent reductions have not been so drastic nor so frequent. The 1942 report of the Public Service Commission shows reductions of $250,083 annually. (The reports are for the State fiscal year, July 1 to June 30.) The 1941 report showed cuts of $401,442.94; the 1940 report, reductions of $1,300,000, and the 1941 report, reductions of $1,400,000, including a system-wide cut of $350,000 a year for patrons of the Indiana Bell Telephone Co.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Spartan Mothers or Mamma's Boys

In the national stock-taking growing out of the war, one lesson for American women has become evident. They could stand a little stiffening of the spine.

American youth has fought heroically far better than might have been expected considering its background, and there has been noble sacrifice on the home front. But there are being heard increasingly some disturbing comments that women would do well to ponder.

One of these, frequently voiced by men is, "Well, the mothers are to blame." They are referring to the alarming number of draft. board rejections for mental and nervous disorders, and to the increasing numbers of psychiatric cases being invalided home from battle areas.

Coddling Parents Make Weak Men

Why do men say this? Are they merely passing the buck? No. Mothers are the chief mentors and disciplinarians in most American homes, and women set the social pace generally in this country. Because of the kind of homes and the kind of society they have created, American youth has found it especially hard to adapt to the rigors and discipline of war.

Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general of the Army, blames the coddling of children by parents and too much "do as you please" education for the high percentage of near psychiatric cases among Army casualties. Young men with such backgrounds, he says, can't take the shock of combat. He points out that in one group of 1000 near psychiatrics, 85 per cent showed histories of similar difficulties in civil life. "The idea the Army is making the boys crazy is not so," he says. "It's just finding out those that are."

Recently Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, called in a noted psychiatric specialist as consultant as a result of the concern over the large number of men rejected because examining physicians felt they lacked sufficient stability to stand the transition from civilian to military life.

A study of the American fighting men in North Africa has led Hanson W. Baldwin, military expert of the New York Times, to the conclusion that the American people as well as their soldiers need to develop more inner stamina. Writing on the lessons of Tunisia, he says the Americans there demonstrated their national strengths—"intelligence, dash, flexibility, quickness to learn, humor, comradeship, unselfishness," but also their weaknesses, particularly "lack of leadership, mental toughness and discipline."

Waste, slackness, complacency, a slap-happy way of doing things without watching detail, a lack of political consciousness, and a feeling of self-pity in the face of hardships—all these things handicap the young American in war—and one might well add, in peace.

While the British Tommy, according to Mr. Baldwin, is politically conscious to a high degree, the American fighter is too ebullient and happy-go-lucky to bother much over what it is all about. He also found a "curious self-pity about many of the men." American fighters write a lot of poetry, he reported, sending in 200 or more poems to the African edition of The Stars and Stripes weekly. About one-third of these have a note of self-pity, speak of "sleeping on the cold, hard ground" or "remember the steaks, the chops, the stews."

Why is American youth indifferent and even infantile in regard to political affairs? Are teachers and parents to blame? Or is it merely a reflection of a national attitude?

Learn Self-Pity In Early Life

Whence the self-pity? That one is not so hard to answer. It is partly due to what the Japanese militarists call our obsession with "Beautyrest mattresses." But it is largely a reflection of mothers' attitudes. The outstanding weakness of American women—perhaps all women—is self-pity. Some call it the martyr complex. And since the last World War women generally have measured their happiness in material things against what other people had—and usually found it lacking. Women, in their pursuit of luxury, have been steadily softening their men, softening their children.

But, the question may be asked, why should men be made hard, for war, which is neither normal nor human?

Men should not be made hard for war, but to save themselves from war. They should be made hard enough to sustain and defend their peace, hard enough to wrestle with its problems and solve them, hard enough not to fear fighting for it early enough—when the Manchurias and the Ethiopias are being despoiled, hard enough to shoulder its irksome and petty irresponsibilities and not slough them off on politicians, hard enough to build a world in which peace is possible, hard enough to take the dare that it can be built.

But men will never become this hard unless most women get a good injection of Spartan blood.

These Women!

Beauty Inside Out

By Margaret George

If a visitor from Mars were to accept the promises of modern cosmetics, as displayed on the counters of the nation, or in its magazines, he would probably be disillusioned when confronted with a sizable sample of female Americana.

Not that the cosmetics aren't one of the wonders of the twentieth century, not that American women are clumsy in the application thereof. That's not it at all.

It's simply that too many American women overlook the fact that beauty isn't something you can buy in bottles. It's something that has to have it's base in a healthy, smooth-functioning organism. You can't go into a salon and say "Do me over; make me beautiful" and come out done. Not if you're sick inside, flabby with overweight, nervous, worried.

There's a salon in this town, however, that doesn't start from the outside. If you're a woman who's suffering from one of numerous complaints (including the aforementioned and more besides), they'll recommend, and administer, a course of treatments that'll make your cosmetics do what they're supposed to do—add to what you have, not disguise it.

You'll feel like you "used to" after a month's session in this salon's gymnasium with steam cabinet treatment and skin-perking showers thrown in—this for about $18.

If you're overweight, or if you're just a woman who doesn't get enough physical exercise, here's the place to get it under expert tutelage. Once you've learned these exercises, you can keep yourself in trim thereafter by following them at home.

The salon is equipped with all kinds of electric exercising gadgets, including the exercycle, ring-rollers, small barrel rollers, slenda-vogue muscle applicators, tiger-stretch equipment.

If you happen to be a sufferer from rheumatism or arthritis, a series of their thermal baths will go a long way toward making your days brighter. A month of these treatments, together with massage, comes to around $45.

If you just need a new lease on life what with war work and general fatigue marshaling* his forces against you, a series of this salon's vapor baths (even if you aren't especially tired, a sniff of the oil of pine and oil of eucalyptus scents they use, is enough to make you want same) can give you a wonderful pick-up.

They have a sundeck with individual cabanas, they have—the story could go on and on, but this is all for now. . . .

Market Report On Fruits, Vegetables

August days are vegetable harvest and canning days. And the ripe, beautifully colored "love apple," or tomato, is the No. 1 canning vegetable at Washington vegetable counters this week. The Washington Market Reporter of the Food Distribution Administration, who is in daily contact with the wholesale market, reports an abundant supply of homegrown tomatoes, of uniformly, excellent quality. Their price, as well as the time, is right for canning. Save ration points next winter and serve your family healthful, appetizing meals by storing away this precious, Vitamin C-rich vegetable.

Next to tomatoes, green beans head a long list of vegetables on the plentiful side this week. Other "plentifuls" include beets, cabbage, eggplant, green peppers, corn, large-size cucumbers, potatoes and sweet potatoes. Some of these vegetables are a little more mature than that desired for canning, but all are of good quality with very few price changes. Sweet potatoes, a newcomer on the market last week, are increasing in supply and their price declining. Prices for the others are the same as they have been.

In lighter supply are carrots, lima beans, iceberg lettuce and squash. The quality of the carrots, lettuce and the nearby squash is good, that of the lima beans fair to good. The price of carrots, lettuce and lima beans is unchanged, while squash is in the high-priced bracket.

Few price changes are noted in the fruit line. Cantaloupes and watermelons lead as the fruits in most plentiful supply and the lowest priced. Delaware and the Eastern Shore of Maryland are now supplying the bulk of the cantaloupes on the Washington market. They are "tops" in both quality and flavor. The watermelons are from the South and of good quality. Most popular varieties of peaches are the Freestone Albertas and Golden Jubilees from Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey. Their quality is generally good, but they are in light supply and cling to high prices. California pears, plums, Thompson seedless grapes and apricots are of very good quality but in light supply and high priced. The supply of Florida pineapples is increasing, and their price declining. Their quality is good. Citrus fruits are scarce and selling at ceiling prices.

Brazilians Want to Learn U. S. Recipes

By Genevieve Reynolds

Brazilians are definitely nutrition conscious. You hear the women adding and subtracting calories—delving into the mysteries of vitamins. This is the observation of shy, petite Senhora Margarete de Andrade, North American by birth and a Brazilian by marriage.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"Already familiar with hot dogs, waffles and ice cream, the Brazilians are eager to learn more and more North American recipes," she said: "Apple pie with cheese has become quite popular among them.

That isn't all. The people of that country are eager to know all about our culture, our everyday life, schools, colleges, war industries, social service work; in fact, everything, according to Senhora Andrade.

Back in 1937, she took an exhibit of books to Brazil under the auspices of the Institute of International Education which was sponsored in that country by the Associaco Brasileira de Educacao. After the tour-exhibit, the books were placed in the libraries and schools for permanent use. As soon as the war ends Senhora Andrade will have another exhibit ready to take to Brazil, larger and better than the previous one.

Early 'Good Neighbors'

Deeply in love with her adopted land, she has been doing her utmost to bring about a closer understanding between the people of Brazil and the United States. This she had been doing quietly and effectively long before the Good Neighbor Policy became fashionable.

When a mere slip of a girl in high school she married handsome Gabriel Andrade, Brazilian Consul in New York City. Leaving New York, they went to Chicago, where he was on duty, and in 1928 went to Brazil. There she lived two years, then followed a sojourn in Paris and other European capitals. After the death of her husband she returned to the United States and reentered school. She studied nutrition at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, received a certificate and went on to Columbia University to take her degree. Also, she took special training at Bellevue Hospital. Add to that a business course.

Girls Now Learn to Work

Referring to the feminine sex of Brazil, she explained that the girls now are being taught to earn a livelihood. The old emphasis on "get married—don't work" is disappearing rapidly. In fact, she declares that Brazil is going modern in every way and that reputedly it is leading the world in contemporary architecture.

As chairman of the National M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club's Committee of Friendship with Brazil, Senhora Andrade did an excellent job of introducing the Military Missions and Diplomatic Corps to the club members. In fact, the Brazilians were so eager to help out that they bought their own tickets to attend the club's friendship dance recently. Out of the 200 at the dance about 45 were Brazilians.

SENHORA DE ANDRADE

Working with Senhora Andrade on the permanent committee are Miss Ruth Richie, Miss Frances Harris, Mrs. Jewell King, Mrs. Louise Dennis and Miss Estelle Howard.

Besides promoting friendship in the get-together social manner, the committee is raising funds to bring two Brazilian students here after the war. One of the students, a college graduate, will take a business course, and the other girl will study in one of the colleges. Sponsoring the project, the National M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club, which emphasizes the ideals of friendship, will entertain the girls in the homes of the various club members.

Zonta Club Meeting

In line with the present civilian Defense Recruitment Campaign, the Zonta Club of Washington will hear Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, a volunteer worker with the Office of Civilian Defense, give the answer to the question "What Can I Do for Civilian Defense in My Community?" at its regular luncheon meeting today, 1 p. m., at the Y. W. C. A.

Fall Fashion Find

By Ruth Gregory

You'll do a lot of searching before you'll find another suit that matches this one, both for style and price.

We don't like to stick our necks out this way, particularly when so many new and wonderful clothes for college girls and business girls are starting to come into the stores, but we're willing to risk it on this little all-wool black suit.

That fitted jacket with its black braid edging and buttons is the knid of thing you'll find in the most expensive new Fall suits. The Victorian look is one of the smart fashion trends we've talked about before.

If you're a busy girl, in the office or elsewhere, this is one of those right-for-all-occasions suits you'll need. It's not too dressy to be worn to the office, and it's fancy enough to take you to the swankiest social function. You can start wearing it as a dress come the first cool September days (we hope they start by then). Thereafter you'll be wearing it as a suit with different blouses, with colored sweaters.

The black skirt in itself makes a fine addition to your wardrobe. Wear it with a black sweater, brightened with a bit of jewelry, or top it off with a beige wool jersey blous.e

In case you're one of those females who's allergic to black (we're not), it also comes in a wonderful shade of red with black braid trimming, or in cadet blue with matching trim. For about $17 we think this dress-suit is a prize. It comes in sizes 9 to 15.

For further information, please call NAtional 4200, Extension 324.

Study the Label

When the customer meets a new fabric, she should study the label which accompanies it or consult the salesperson about its wearing and cleaning properties. Often, washing directions are included on the tags or labels. If not, the safest procedure is to wash the article separately by hand in lukewarm suds. Rinse thoroughly in water of the same temperature, and dry and press in the manner indicated by the type of fabric. Press crepes and satins and other fabrics which would normally be pressed, lay out flat sweaters and other knitted garments which need to be returned to shape, hang up stockings and knitted underwear which do not need ironing. When pressing rayons be careful not to use too hot an iron or to apply the iron with too much pressure on seams and folds as this often causes glazing of the surface or even broken threads.

Wear "Invisible Glove"

Hands that are helping the war effort by digging in the soil of a victory garden, repainting furniture, or doing a greasy or oily job in a production plant, can be protected from dirt and stains with a greaseless cream that forms an "invisible glove." It is applied to the hands and arms and under the fingernails, before starting work. An application is easily removed with water, along with the dirt.

Washing Woolen Wear

White woolens may be soaked with safety but when even a touch of color is present, the briefest soaking should be avoided. The longer the fabric is exposed to water the greater is the chance of non-fast dyes fading or bleeding.

Rinse sweaters in clear lukewarm water, squeeze gently to remove as much moisture as possible, then roll or pat in a turkish towel to remove further moisture. After this, lay out flat to dry, fitting to measurements taken before washing. A dry towel or cloth underneath will encourage drying by absorbing the moisture from the bottom. Quick drying is always important, but particularly so when two or more colors are combined in one garment.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The ease and cleverness with which bottle formulas can be concocted, has led many a young mother to abandon nursing in favor of bottles.

By so doing she admits publicly she cannot compete with artificial formulas! Or, may it be she dosn't want to bother with nursing?

Let's dismiss any strange impression that imitation is as good as the original. It may be adequate and satisfactory, but since baby is entitled to the best food any mother can provide, she should at least give him or her the benefit of breast milk for as long as she is able to supply it.

Breast milk supplies a baby with exactly the food elements nature intended him to have. These are served virtually sterile and at the proper temperature.

The efforts the mother's own body has made to ward off or be victorious over disease has provided her with anti-bodies which benefit her baby. The nursing baby is relatively immune to disease the first few months of life.

The baby's effort to get breast milk, which demands a vigorous sucking movement, is invaluable to the development of baby's underslung jaw. Nursing is hard work and psychologically there could be no better introduction to this world of hard work than for baby to start life fighting hard for his natural sustenance.

The free-flowing bottle nipple offers no such opposition and so he believes nutrition drops into his mouth by virtue of a few desultory and lazy punches of the gums.

The cuddling a nursing baby inevitably receives, is the means by which a baby builds up a firm belief in the essential lovingness and security of his environment. Here for him are warmth and support and the promise of food and his mother's love bringing to full flower a confirmation of the goodness of his world and his joy of being a part of it.

Any mother who weighs these known benefits of nursing against her own selfish comfort or convenience or her social ambitions, is not living up to the best of what the name mother implies. Even three or four months of nursing will give the baby an invaluable start toward robust health and a calm, happy, well-balanced personality.

Our leaflet, "Information for Nursing Mothers" may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Montgomery's Beret

By International News Service

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the famed British Eighth Army, issued a fashion tip to American women Sunday through International News Service.

The hero of the North African campaign, interviewed by War Correspondent Clark Lee in Sicily, remarked that he had been informed "all the ladies in the United States are wearing my beret."

Which is perfectly okay with the general, he told Lee, if the ladies know "they should wear it on the back of the head."

One Mother Reminds Another That Young Adults Only Acquire Worldly Wisdom From Their Own Mistakes, Though Early Sound Training Is Asset

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your advice of July 30, to the widowed mother who is greatly worried by her 20-year-old daughter's headstrong decision to "live her own life,"—a policy which, for the present, includes having a love affair with a sophisticated married man,—was about the best that could be given, in the circumstances. Especially since the mother says her daughter is intelligent. You tell this mother that she cannot directly save her daughter from folly; and that henceforth only the indirect influence of the mother's character can (if anything can) serve as a "beam" to guide the girl eventually to safe harbor.

In endorsing your counsel, I know whereof I speak, for my 20-year-old daughter went through a comparable experience at the same age,—except that the man was divorced; and she (my daughter) was living at home with me at the time, whereas this girl has insisted on remaining in New York City (where the man is located), after her mother's work has brought her to Washington. The question may be raised as to why, if the girl is intelligent, she can behave so foolishly. The answer is, that while the girl is intelligent, she is only wise or educated insofar as her experiences to date have taught her. And she is not yet educated to a realistic knowledge of human nature.

According to the mother, this girl is infatuated with a married man, father of two children, who has charming manners, and is a brilliant scholar, lecturer and teacher of languages, holding a responsible position; and her vanity is puffed up by his sophisticated court,—which he justifies with vague references to his intention to divorce his wife and marry her, after the war is over. If this young girl could see this man stripped of his urbane polish and academic prestige, she would see an immature man, a mental adolescent, who married either the mother-type of woman,—who lacks "romantic" imagination,—or a girl who is becoming mature and adult in character through rearing a family, while he remains "arrested" at the adolescent level of personality. She would realize that because of his failure to grow spiritually, he needs to be married to the "comfortable" kind of woman who is motherly enough to overlook and even smile at his adolescent flirtatious interest in pretty young girls, while protectively adoring him and sympathizing with his weakness.

Movies Give Youth Wrong Idea of Love

To come back to my daughter's experience: The man in her case likewise was older; a scholar and professor; had been married and had two children, although he was divorced when he captured her interest. Like this mother, I tried talking to my daughter, tried exposing the folly of a match between them. And I talked to the man as well. The talks simply brought them closer together. They became engaged. My daughter's wedding dress and trousseau were bought, when at the eleventh hour, she "saw the light." She, too, was an intelligent girl, with a very independent spirit. With all her inexperience, she was a very sincere and honest person; and it was only in exercising her best judgment, at the time, that she uncovered the truth of her mistake.

The man felt that she should think of his wishes, rather than her own, in making decisions; and felt that her honest independence of mind, as it began to be manifested in their association, was due to his having given her "her own way" too often, in the first flush of their romance. My daughter, on the other hand, had misjudged the nature of his love for her, because,—like a great many modern girls,—she had derived her "knowledge of love," (if such it may be called), from the movies. She had the idea that the more ardent and possessive the man's attitude is, the more "real" is his love. So far as physical love goes, this may be true; but it is certainly overlooking the spiritual and rational elements of rapport, which are indispensable to lasting love; and particularly when a young girl marries an older man. And as this fact began to dawn on my daughter, along with the realization that the man's "love" for her was mostly physical and selfish, she promptly recovered from her infatuation.

Kind Providence Helps Conscientious Parents

I venture to hope that the same good fortune may overtake Julie. If her sophisticated hero loved her with a spiritual love, he never would have involved her in the present scandalous situation,—in the name of love. He is not even honorable, or he would not have promoted even so much as a friendship with Julie, without his wife's knowledge and sanction. Julie's mother thinks her daughter's loneliness for masculine companionship, now that so many young men have gone to war, is in part accountable for her infatuation with the wrong kind of man. I wish Julie could have heard a lecture I heard recently, addressed to a group of young people by an Army officer,—who warned them not to let loneliness cause them to betray their high ideals, to their lasting regret. If Julie would sign up with one of the many groups in New York City which entertain lonely soldiers and use her intelligence and attractiveness to boost their morale, she would quickly get a saving perspective on her tawdry infatuation. And once recovered from her experience, she will have a maturity of viewpoint from which she can give truly unselfish friendship to lonely boys.

If one has respect for personality, one can only counsel: "Never forbid." The young must decide for themselves; and as Benjamin Franklin observed, "A wise man learns from experience—." When conscientious parents incline to worry about their headstrong offspring, let them remember that where home teaching has been sound, there is a kind Providence which sees the youngster safely through dangerous straits. Perhaps the realists would say: It is just their good sense asserting itself at last. Sincerely, O. W. U.

Instances Where Religion Helped Girls See Straight

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: During the last war, I came to Washington from an average Middle Western town. I had never before been away from home, and had been disciplined by a religious family,—who believed that religion was to be daily lived, and not just "professed" by Sunday church attendance. I was modestly educated; and my work placed me in association with scientists, very highly educated. Their superior education made me somewhat in awe of them.

One younger scientist, whom the others praised highly, started paying me attention. He was married and a father; and my first reaction was that I thought myself blessed that one of his superior endowments should even notice me. I was flattered no end. However, his attentions got more personal; and that worried my conscience. But I wasn't sure what I ought to do, or what I really wanted to do. After a time, my religion won the day and I tried brushing him off. But he wouldn't brush off. Then I became insulting to him; and while he would be sore for a while, he came back for more. And the more he besought me, the less his superior education impressed me; and gradually, my awe-struck admiration changed to frank detestation. From that time on,—I have never stood in awe of education or position, as such. I take nothing for granted about the person possessing these advantages. I wait for proof of the person's essential superiority. I offer this personal experience for the benefit of Julie,—the girl whose problem was discussed July 30. Once Julie sees the shoddy character of her sophisticated beau, his flattery won't be as impressive as it seems today. But she has to learn through her own mistakes.

Priest's Kindly Humor Dismissed Temptation

Oddly enough, some time after I had come to my senses, a friend of mine got emotionally involved with a married man. She was Catholic, and she intended to keep faith with her religion; but she felt she couldn't renounce the man. She finally decided to drop into St. Patrick's Church, where the venerable Monsignor Thomas was then hearing confessions. She said she intended discussing her problem with him; and see what guidance the church could give her. I was waiting for her; and when she came out of the church, she was laughing. I said: "Well, what did he say?" She replied: "Funny thing; he said the one thing that gives me strength to break off the affair." I asked: "What was that?" She said, "Well, I told him I was in love with a married man; and the man thought he could get a divorce and marry me; and that I wasn't going to give him up. Then Monsignor Thomas said to me, 'What's the matter with you? Can't you get a man of your own?' I got to thinking that over; and then he said, 'What do you, a young girl, want with some other woman's cast-off?'"

And then he told her to say the Lord's Prayer, thinking each sentence of the prayer out in her mind; conscious of what she was saying; and when she came to the part which says, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us,"—to ask herself whether she could forgive another woman for taking her husband from her. Unless she could honestly say yes to that, he explained, it was useless to ask the Lord's help; and she couldn't do anything without His help. The girl told me she was cured; that she didn't want the man on those terms. A bit of kindly ridicule from a wise old Irish priest had done more for the girl than any amount of argument could. Sincerely, M. C.

'It Will Be 'Gingham Again'—Come Victory

Mrs. Hobart Thinks Change From Factory Denims to Kitchen Apron Will Be Welcomed

By Peggy Preston

Once the war is over, women will readily forsake their factory denims for the traditional gingham apron.

This answer to one "postwar question," comes from a woman whose business it is to know about such things. She is Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart, jr., known officially as the adviser on the employment of women to the director of the training division, Civilian Personnel, Office of the Secretary of War.

Specifically, her job concerns the training and utilization of women in plants, factories and shops operated by the War Department, and the brown-eyed, energetic lady spends two-thirds of her time in the field taking first-hand note of the situation.

"Only a small percentage of women are by nature genuinely interested in industrial work," she points out. "To those few the war is opening new avenues of endeavor in which they are as adept as men. But the great majority of women now entering the field are moved by patriotic desire to release men for active duty. I think there is no question but that when peace comes, they will gladly relinquish their war-born tasks for work that is more compatible with their natures."

Mrs. Hobart, who this summer is making a personal survey of plants on the West Coast, feels that women are doing a beautiful job in today's war effort.

Work Winning Praise From Army Officers

In reporting on a recent field trip, she told of seeing women training in shoe repairing shops, a field traditionally closed to women. She enumerated a dozen more such instances in ordnance plants throughout the country where women are filling the draft-depleted ranks of workers, and, according to Mrs. Hobart, their work is winning high praise from the Army officers in charge.

For the most part, the transition from the home to the factory has not been difficult for either the women or their employers, according to Mrs. Hobart. But a major problems exists, she believes, in the fact that most women, unlike men, have definite home ties; matters that demand their attention daily, regardless of their work outside the home.

According to statistics, 60 per cent of women in war plants are married and the question arises constantly of providing adequate child care during the hours when the mother is at work.

"Women are completely satisfied to work, only so long as their homes are in order," she said. "We have found that no matter how important their job may be, their home and the welfare of their children come first."

Need For Group Child Care Is Great

Proof of this, she explained, is that fact that absenteeism among women workers was higher than among men in centers where there was no provision for group child care.

"When proper, efficient nurseries were established it was found that the record of absenteeism was approximately the same as that for men," she continued.

Mrs. Hobart, a native-born Virginian, has lived most of her life in Cincinnati, where she has done legislative work in connection with women in industry. She came to her present desk at the Pentagon Building about eight months ago. Her work takes her from one end of the United States to the other, and she regrets the fact that she is unable to spend more time in Washington, a city she enjoys a great deal.

A graduate of the University of Cincinnati, she took her M.A. in Political Science at Ohio State University.

Mme. Hurban To Launch Liberty Ship

Mme Hurban, the attractive wife of the Czechoslovakian Ambassador has a double treat in store this coming week.

On Sunday she will leave by plane with the Ambassador, for her first trip to the Pacific Coast; and on Wednesday she will officiate at the christening of a Liberty Ship in Los Angeles. The ship has been named for the first President of Czechoslovakia, Thomas C. Masaryk, and Mme. Hurban is more than pleased with the opportunity to take part in the ceremony.

Before returning to Washington, the Ambassador and Mme. Hurban plan to make a two-week trip through California, where the Ambassador has several speaking engagements scheduled. They plan to visit friends between dates, in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Hollywood.

Also going to Los Angeles for the launching is Vice Air Marshal Karel Janousek, head of the Czechoslovakian Air Force, who has been in this country for the past few weeks, and was entertained recently at a reception at the Czechoslovakian Embassy. He is currently on a brief inspection trip in the Bahamas and will return here on Thursday. The general will be accompanied to Los Angeles by the Air and Military Attache at the Embassy, Col. Oldrich Spaniel.

Richard Davis Here From Oriental Post

A recent arrival in Washington from the war theater in the Far East is Richard Davis, third Secretary of the United States Embassy in China, who has a 30-day leave from his post in Chungking.

Mr. Davis, a graduate of Harvard, has been in the diplomatic service for six years. He was first assigned to Hamburg, Germany, and went from there to Tsing Tao. He has been interned by the Japanese and has been in China for the last year.

Though Mr. Davis has not disclosed his plans, he will try to arrange a visit to his home in Jamestown, N. Y., before returning to his post.

Miss Meushaw Becomes Bride Of Army Man

The Sacred Heart Church was the setting yesterday for the marriage of Miss Marie Agnes Meushaw to Staff Sergt. Clarence William Lee, jr.

Officiating at the ceremony was the Rev. Roger Brokerick. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Meushaw of this city, and Sergeant Lee is the son of Mrs. Clarence William Lee and the late Mr. Lee, also of Washington. At present he is stationed at Como, Miss.

Following the ceremony a reception took place at the Statler Hotel for about 200 guests. The couple left later for Como, where they will make their home.

Cynthia Rowan To Be Married

Comdr. and Mrs. Robert L. Rowan of Falls Church, formerly of Weirton, Pa., announce the engagement of their daughter, Cynthia Lee, to Robert J. Hughes, U. S. Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Hughes of Philadelphia.

Miss Rowan is a student at Marjorie Webster College and Mr. Hughes is stationed at Lake Forest, Ill.

Doris Beckwith Engaged to Cadet Crans

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lincoln Beckwith announce the engagement of their daughter, Doris Louise, to Cadet Robert Russell Crans, U. S. N. R.

The bride-elect attended Holton-Arms School and Chevy Chase College. She made her debut in January, 1940. Cadet Crans attended American University and entered the service in September, 1942. He is now stationed at Pensacola, Fla., where he will receive his commission in September.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Newlyweds To Make Home In Arlington

Upon their return from a wedding trip, Lieut. Ernest G. Perry, United States Army, and his bride, the former Miss Edna May Moore, will make their home in Arlington, Va.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Moore of Pelham, N. Y., and Lieutenant Perry is the son of Mrs. Ernest G. Perry of Cornwall, N. Y., and the late Mr. Perry. The couple were married August 2 in the Roman Catholic Mission Chapel in Pelham Manor. Officiating at the ceremony was the Rev. Charles A. Werckle, and a reception followed at the Hotel Gramatan.

The bride wore a gown of white satin made with a net yoke appliqued with seed pearls and a veil of tulle fastened with a lace coronet. She carried an ivory-bound prayerbook with a marker of white orchids and bouvardia. Her only attendant was Miss Virginia Suomila of Mount Vernon. George A. Moore was his brother's best man and ushers were Raymond McConnor and Richard Unger.

Arlington Teen-Ager Is "Farmerette"

Miss Gay Husserl, 15-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gerhart Husserl of Arlington, Va., is spending the summer as a "farmerette" on a farm at Francestown, N. H.

She reports to her father, who is professor of law at National University School of Law, that she is making $3.50 a week.

Portrait of Princess Takes a Trip

Now en route to England is this recently completed portrait of Princess Aleksander Hohenlohe-Ingelfingen, done by the noted artist, Eleanor Martin, in her Washington studio. It is going to Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, U. S. envoy to seven governments-in-exile in London, and Mrs. Biddle, mother of Princess Hohenlohe. The second portrait Miss Martin has painted of Princess Hohenlohe, this one is being taken across the Atlantic by a friend returning to her homeland after spending several months in Washington. Miss Martin, who also recently did a portrait of the Hohenlohe baby, is now working on one of Prince Hohenlohe.

Maryland Physician's Wife Gives Time To And Pointers On, Price and Rationing Board

Mrs. C. W. Mitchell Cites Difficulties Workers Face

Decries 'Impatience, Unpleasant Talk' From the Public

By Betty Ruth McDevitt

Promotion of better understanding between 50,000 persons and the Silver Spring, Md., War Price and Rationing Board, which serves them, is a task nobody would envy. Yet it is the one now being tackled by Mrs. Claude William Mitchell, one of the most active of volunteer war workers in the community.

As community service chairman, Mrs. Mitchell is trying to pacify the hundreds of appeals and requests which pour into the board. Assigned to processed foods and shoes, Mrs. Mitchell works at her desk several days a week from 10 a. m. until 4 p. m. and some evenings from 8 until 10:30 p. m. She also sits on the price panel, which keeps tab on price ceilings and point values kept by local merchants.

"One of our greatest difficulties," Mrs. Mitchell stated, "is impatience on the part of the public who thinks we make the rules and regulations." She pointed out the board is not compelled to give anything a person is not entitled to, citing particularly persons who lose ration books. "We try, however, not to make anyone suffer."

No Time For The Telephone

Defending the board on criticism that so many persons are unable to reach the board by telephone, Mrs. Mitchell explained that volunteers have to be depended upon for that phase of the work with anywhere from 50 to 200 persons in line pounding questions, awaiting renewals and discussing other matters, there is no time left in which to answer the telephone she said.

"While we do need more help we have got to have volunteers willing to come and take unpleasant talk from the public, work long hours; and those we can depend upon at specific times," Mrs. Mitchell continued. It is useless, she pointed out, for a person to come in one or two days to help and then never return, since it takes time for the routine to be taught.

Mrs. Mitchell's post, which she has held since March, struck close to her home when she composed letters sent to all physicians in Silver Spring, Takoma Park and Kensington, the territory covered by the board. Being the wife of a prominent physician, Mrs. Mitchell found it easy to ask the doctors for their cooperation when they write certificates for patients who need additional rationed foods. The letters in part appealed to the doctors to determine minimum needs of rationed items and indicate the same on their certificates only after they have given full consideration of unrationed items which might be used as substitutes.

Don't Hoard Those Food Points

If the public did not confuse need with desire much of the board's work would be eliminated, according to Mrs. Mitchell. Backing up this statement she pulled out an application from a woman who wanted a new pair of dress shoes. She had no coupon left. "We cannot meet such a request, since our regulations call for consideration only in cases of need," Mrs. Mitchell continued.

Mrs. Mitchell urges the housekeeper not to wait until the last minute to use their processed food points and shoe coupons, because when there is a shortage a run is thereby caused on certain products.

Maryland had the highest number of replacements for War Book No. 2, lost, stolen or destroyed, in May in the region except for New York City district office. It was because of this report from the regional office of OPA that Mrs. Mitchell issued the following warning: "The Silver Spring office has been accused of being tough in the matter of replacing lost books, but it seems we are going to have to be tougher. It is a patriotic obligation of the individual. The local board is not required to replace lost books, but may do so at its own discretion. Every book issued to an unjustified claimant gives that person an unfair advantage over his neighbor in obtaining additional food at a time when our supply is critical." Mrs. Mitchell urges grocers and others finding ration books to turn them in at the Silver Spring office of the War Price and Rationing Board, 7920 Georgia Avenue.

Before Mrs. Mitchell became so busy on the board she was chairman of Women's Activities of the Montgomery County Civilian Defense for the Silver Spring area. Residents of the community for 23 years, Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell have a son, Pvt. John A. Mitchell, U. S. A., who is attending medical school at the University of Maryland, and a daughter, Margaret, who recently was married to Lieut. William G. Mollenkopf, U. S. A., engaged in research work at the Army Air Surgeon's office in Washington.

New March of Time on Japan Is Worth a Look

Two Talented Young Washingtonians Appear Professionally for the First Time Here; Army Camp Sees 'Run Little Chillun'

By Marjorie Kelly

The critical fraternity, foregathered as per custom in the Loew's sumptuous preview room yesterday morning, got an advance look at an ominously impressive March of Time release which, not yet on public view, will be shown along with "Dixie" when that great big beautiful show unfolds on the Palace screen come Thursday.

"And Then Japan" is the title of the MOT release. Sounds lacy and pointless and unlike the usual straightforward MOT title, but it turns out to refer to the policy that we will lick Hitler first—and then Japan.

The film sounds a warning to any who think that the task of defeating Japan is left until later because it's a trivial matter we can toss off any time. Based on Ambassador Grew's book, "Report from Tokyo," it uses an excerpt from a newsreel in which Grew said that "Japan is prepared and willing to fight a hundred years."

Apparently a compilation of old newsreels, the release attempts to show something about the differences between the Japanese civilization and ours. To be really effective it would need to be much longer, or to be released in two "chapters" as was the notable earlier March of Time on India. But it is next best to reading Ambassador Grew's book, and will not only be seen by a great many more people than are likely to read the book, but will probably induce many people to read the book. Your reporter for one, anyway!

Two Washingtonians will be seen in "Junior Miss" next week when the comedy arrives for its third engagement here. They are Dorise Bell of 5315 Sixteenth Street Northwest, who is the boy crazy elder sister in the play, and Joel Marston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Friedman of Hertford Place Northwest, who plays one of the exuberant "junior misters" who "rush" Miss Bell.

Both youngsters are seen here for the first time as professionals, although they are familiar to patrons of amateur theatricals. Young Marston, a graduate of Central High School, received early stage training at Rose Robison Cohen's Children's Studio, worked for a time in the Roadside Summer Theater at Rockville, Md., appearing in "The Drunkard," "The Pioneer's Daughter," etc., and also was with the Blackfriars Guild and the Washington Civic Theater. Joel has had a year's training at the Pasadena Playhouse in Hollywood before Max Gordon signed him for "Junior Miss," and is off to Hollywood again as soon as "J. M." closes here, this time to make pictures.

Brunette Miss Bell studied for two years at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York, becoming well known meanwhile as a model, and her prowess in dramatic school is shown by the fact that only three days after she got her diploma from the Academy last spring, she was engaged as an understudy for "Junior Miss" and was promoted in a few weeks to the feature role of Lois in the comedy.

For the first time in Broadway history a preview of a Brodaway show will be presented to a soldier audience, when USO Camp Shows take the folk musical "Run Little Chillun" to Camp Kilmer, N. J., this weekend. Like all camp shows, this one will be admission free, although it is exactly the same show which opens next week at regular Broadway prices. The all-Negro musical, written by Hall Johnson, features the Hall Johnson Choir of 50 voices. Arrangements for this fine gesture toward interracial amity are to be credited to George Jessel, Lew Cooper and Meyer Davis, producers of the show.

Local cafes are bidding for the after-theater trade of Dick Midgley's Willard Roof Players. The cast makes a habit of seeking refreshment after the curtain rings down on "East Lynn" nightly, and since they always stay in character it's never long before they have all their fellow customers joining in "A Bicycle Built for Two."

Hedy Main Topic Of Gabby Polly

Hollywood—Next time Director Al Hall tries to outguess Hedy Lamarr, he'll think a second time.

On the set of M-G-M's "Heavenly Body," there is a white cockatoo whose chief purpose is to call: "Polly wants a cracker" when the star enters the scene. Miss Lamarr became interested in the bird and kept talking to it. This troubled Hall, who was afraid it would refuse to talk when he filmed the scene. Every time Hedy started near the bird, Hall would warn: "Hedy," in a loud voice. This happened frequently.

Time to shoot the scene came. Everything was ready. So was the cockatoo. But by this time the bird wasn't interested in "crackers." All it would shout was:

"Hedy!"

Shakes Cities for Village in Film

Hollywood. — Preston Sturges, whose entire life has been spent in great cities including New York, Paris, Chicago and Los Angeles, has at last deserted the metropolitan background for one of his stories and gone to a tiny village.

After six pictures amid the hustle and bustle of big towns, he sets his heroine and hero, Betty Hutton and Eddie Bracken, down in a mere hamlet for "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek." The name of the burg is, of course, Morgan's Creek.

Two Washingtonians in Comedy Cast

JOEL MARSTON AND DORISE BELL, talented young Capitalites, both importantly cast in Max Gordon's production of "Junior Miss," opening a two-week engagement at the National Theater next Monday night. On this third time around for the Jerome Chodorov-Joseph Fields delightful comedy of adolescence, the principals, for the greater part, will be new to Washington in their present roles

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, Aug. 3.—More than likely, at this very moment, numbers of established screen players are being tested for some important role in a proposed new film. And if they pay attention to the signs of the times, there must be in every mind the uneasy suspicion that, perhaps, after all the tests are made, some screen unknown may walk off with the prize.

For it's been happening increasingly of late.

Consider the costars of RKO-Radio's "Adventures of a Rookie." The studio planned this as a ripsnorting comedy, showing what befalls the average civilian when he gets into Army training. If it clicked, a whole series of further adventures should follow, advancing through the grades. Rookie might even become general in time . . . "Adventures of a General" say.

Unknowns Copped Roles

Naturally, a couple of good men were needed for the rookie roles, a couple of able comedians who could create laughter in which the joke would be on them, not on the Army. So the tests were launched. But after a score of Hollywood comics were tested, RKO-Radio finally settled for Alan Carney and Wally Brown, two unknowns.

Both came up the hard way, through night clubs and vaudeville, but were unknown to the screen. And the studio finally decided that was an asset, not a liability, because their "new faces" wouldn't be confused by movie-goers with other roles.

In short, as rookies, they'd be rookies, not familiar actors.

Sold By One Picture

Another newcomer has the highly desirable role of leading man to Olivia de Havilland in RKO-Radio's "Government Girl." He is Sonny Tufts, with only one previous picture to his credit.

Director Dudley Nichols thought he'd like to have Fred MacMurray for the role, went over to Paramount to try and borrow him. But Paramount said MacMurray wasn't available, and how would he like to look at their new man, Tufts? Nichols watched while that one film was run off. And Tufts is now the man in Olivia's Washington life.

Out at the Samuel Goldwyn Studio, where "The North Star" is being filmed, a 6-foot, North Hollywood High School lad, never in pictures before, is playing a role for which Goldwyn tested dozens of established players first. When he couldn't find what he wanted, the resourceful producer advertised in Help Wanted: Male.

Young Farley Granger answered the ad, and now he's in.

There are plenty more such instances, too, but these will suffice to point the tale—a tale which is not entirely concerned with newcomers getting the breaks, but why.

The will to do is the answer.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Potpourri

When Sergt. Marion Hargrove, author of the best-seller, "See Here, Private Hargrove," arrived in China, he reported to General Chennault, to whose command he will be attached. "Tell me, sergeant," asked Chennault, "how long do you expect to be here?" . . . "Oh, a year or two," replied Hargrove . . . "Hell," said Chennault, "just how long do you think we're going to hang around here?"

When the Duke and Duchess of Windsor were at the Waldorf last month they returned to the hotel by taxicab. At the hotel entrance they saw a motorcycle escort, police and a group of youngsters holding American and Chinese flags. The Duke thereupon ordered his cab driver to circle the block to the Forty-ninth Street side—where the Windsors walked through the driveway entrance . . . The hotel manager, who was waiting there to greet Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, asked the Duke: "But why didn't you drive right in as usual?" . . . "I started to," replied the man who once ruled the world's greatest empire, "but I didn't want to inconvenience any arrangements for Madame Chiang."

DUKE OF WINDSOR

The Duke, incidentally, wasn't particular which elevator he used at the Waldorf. When he saw an open elevator at his floor he walked in despite the operator's reminder to him that "this is a special elevator for baggage, sir" . . . "I don't mind, if you don't," said the Duke, and moved to the rear of the car. A bellboy then piled some suitcases in front of the car. And at the ground floor the Duke climbed over the bags and left, waving to the operator, "Thanks, awfully."

N. Y. U., taking cognizance of the advance in motion pictures, has promoted Robert Gessner to associate professor of motion pictures—the only professorship of its kind . . . Hamilton Wright of Canada's National Film Board, who was severely burned in a fire at the Ottawa studios, is in a hospital now. Ham Wright wired his N. Y. office this week about the fire and signed it "Baked Ham" . . . Pfc. Jerome B. Skalka, with the Ninth Evacuation Hospital in Africa, writes a letter to his girl in New York every day. Last well she found inclosed an additional note: 'Hang on to this fellow. He writes the best letter in the detachment—The Censor."

Margie Hart, the strip-teaser, received a long-distance phone call last week. "Who's calling?" she asked the operator. "Get his name" . . . The operator reported: "Allen Smith" . . . Miss Hart waited, wondering if the caller possibly could be the author of "Low Man on a Totem Pole" . . . Then she asked the operator: "Which Allen Smith is calling?" . . . One moment, please," said the operator. After a brief pause she returned and reported: "H."

When Al Jolson entertained at the fighing fronts he always insisted upon having only enlisted men in his audience. At one base, when the officers told him they, too, would like to see him perform, Jolson suggested: "Why don't you stand behind the curtain while I'm onstage? Nobody'll see you. The officers agreed . . . At the show that night Jolson told the enlisted men: 'You've all seen kids looking through knot holes in a ball park. Well, I'll show you that officers are like kids." Then he drew aside the curtain.

During the Washington investigation into OWI, Representative Tabor of New York examined the list of expenditures in connection with the operation of the domestic film unit. The list included the salary paid to Ulrich Bell, the noted Washington reporter who became deputy administrator at the Office of Facts and Figures, and who later joined the OWI . . . "I don't quite understand these technical movie terms," said Representative Tabor, pointing to the expense item. "Now tell me—just what is an ulrich bell?"

Three Cheers for Old Notre Dame

Hollywood.—If this keeps up, Notre Dame University Alumni headquarters may as well move out to Pat O'Brien's dressing room at RKO Radio studio where he is filming "The Iron Major."

Pat didn't attend Notre Dame. He went to Marquette and his only connection with the Fighting Irish alma mater was the time he quarterbacked a Marquette team in its annual game against the famous university. However, two years ago he portrayed the great Knute Rockne, Notre Dame coach, in a picture.

Now, every former Notre Dame man in military service looks up O'Brien when he gets to Hollywood. And Pat never turns down a request for a studio visit from any young soldier, sailor or marine from South Bend.

In "The Iron Major," O'Brien plays another famous football coach—Maj. Frank Cavanaugh, who turned out great teams at Dartmouth, Boston College and Fordham.

Dorothy Gets Double Request

Hollywood.—The year's funniest fan letter has reached Dorothy Lamour, from a U. S. sailor making the customary request for an autographed picture.

"I've been reading about you being the favorite pin-up girl of the Services," wrote Pharmacist's Mate Arthur Enders, "and you're my favorite pin-up girl too. Would you please send me some portraits from your new picture 'And the Angels Sing,' and also send the pins to pin them up with."

Showbills for Week Ahead Are Chiefly Escapist

Max Gordon's "Junior Miss" plays here next week, the third time around, and this time at special summer prices. The riotous comedy revolves about the family crises brought on by a 14-year-old who sees too many movies. Sherry Bennett, Max Gordon's latest "find," plays the young lady who causes all the commotion, while Peggy Romane is her best chum, Fuffy. Dorise Bell plays the elder sister and the sorely harassed parents of the enfant terrible are portrayed by Eddie Nugent and Lois Wilson. Opens Monday.

Palace

"DIXIE." Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour in technicolor. Miss Lamour in long skirts. Story is of the life and career of Dan Emmett, daddy of the minstrel shows, Bing of course as Emmett. Marjorie Reynolds is Dottie's competition. Billy de Wolfe is an amiable, unprincipled rascal and others are Raymond Walburn, Lynne Overman, Eddie Foy, jr., Grant Mitchell and Louis DaPron. The new March of Time, "And Then Japan," is on the supplementary bill. Opens Thursday.

RKO-Keith's

"HERS TO HOLD." Deanna Durbin and Joseph Cotten in a romantic tale of a debutante who goes to work in a war industry. Deanna sings "Begin the Beguinne", "Say a Prayer for the Boys Over There", "Seguidilla" from "Carmen", and other songs. Charles Winniger is Deanna's doting father, and Evelyn Ankers and Gus Schilling figure prominently. Opens Thursday.

Earle

"THE CONSTANT NYMPH." Idyllic tale of a composer and the girl he loves without realizing it. Charles Boyer and Joan Fontaine have the leading roles, and the superlative supporting cast includes Alexis Smith, Charles Coburn, Peter Lorre, Dame May Whitty, Brenda Marshall, Edward Ciannelli, and others. Held over.

Capitol

"DUBARRY WAS A LADY." Red Skelton and Lucille Ball hold over a second week in a technicolor fantasy of a comedian who gets a Mickey Finn and dreams he is Louis XV and his chosen lady is Madame DuBarry. Gene Kelly, Zero Mostel, and Donald Meek are around too; music is Cole Porter's and Tommy Dorsey's orchestra plays it.

The completely new stage bill is headed by the comedienne Una Merckel. Walter Donahue, the yonnger brother of song-and-dance man Jack Donahue, will be present with a routine of his own. Capt. William Heyer appears with his coal black horse, "Starless Night," reportedly the "best educated horse in the world," and the Romano Brothers, and Richard Adair, dancer, round out the bill.

Willard Roof

"EAST LYNNE." The most familiar of the melodramas continues a successful run into a third week. Dick Midgley as the mustachioed and conscienceless villain; Natalie Core, this time sweet and long suffering; Ted Tiller as the high-principled hero and Mary Jane Kersey in a slightly devilish role are the featured players. The Ben Yost Quartet and Bibi Osterwald are prominet in the olio. Held over.

Cross Roads

"HAY FEVER." Bright, brittle comedy on the life of an English actress and her highly irregular family. Catherine Ryan as the actress, Forney Reese playing her husband, and Grace Pearson and Gordon Wallace as her incorrigible son and daughter are the principals. Begins a second week tonight.

Metropolitan

"CHINA." Picturization of an actual incident in the Sino-Japanese War, with Loretta Young, Alan Ladd and William Bendix costarring as three Americans in the path of a Japanese drive, who are trying to evacuate a group of Chinese girl students to a town beyond the reach of the Japanese soldiers.

Columbia

"LADY OF BURLESQUE." Third week for Gypsy Rose Lee's comedy-mystery with Barbara Stanwyck as the strip-teaser and Michael O'Shea as the comic who aspires to her affection. Iris Adrian, Gloria Dickson, Victoria Faust, Charles Dingle, Marian Martin and Gerald Mohr are supporting players. Held over.

Little

"THE GOLEM." Julien Duvivier's French film starring Harry Baur, legend of a seventeenth century Frankeinstein created by a rabbi of Prague, which smashed the decadent court of Emperor Rudolph II. Held over.

Pix

"MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON." James tSewart in one of his best roles as the Boy Scout leader elected to the Senate by a poltical machine, which sends him supposing that he knows too little to interfere with their dirty work. Jean Arthur is the young Senator's secretary. Others are Edward Arnold, Claude Rains and Guy Kibbee.

Trans-Lux

"SHOW BUSINESS AT WAR." A March of Time issue with a cast of 75 top-flight entertainers leads a parade of shorts, including newsreels of the bombing of Rome and action in the South Pacific in the battle for Munda. Also "Canine Commandos," a "Person-Oddity—The Armless Dentist," and "Hollywood Daredevils." Opens Friday.

'God Bless Berlin'

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 3.—I have received the following wire: "Exclusive to you. The boys mentioned will actually learn from your column of their selection. Lieut. Bill Holden, Sergt. Edmund O'Brien, Lieut. Tim Holt and Pvt. Arthur Kennedy have been requested by the War Department to appear in the forthcoming Broadway drama about the air forces now being written by Moss Hart. They will report to New York for rehearsals on September 15."

WILLIAM HOLDEN

(Signed) "Staff Sergt. Jerry D. Lewis and Col. Don L. Huchins." My congratulations to all concerned. . . . Ernst Lubitsch is conferring with Col. Oveta Hobby in Washington about his next, "All Out, Eileen." Can't you just hear the colonel saying to our Ernst, "Would you mind parking that cigar until interview is ended?" . . . What's happened to Metro WAC story? Anita Loos wrote it, following which there's been a hunk of silence. . . . The Dwight Wimans are grandparents again. Daughter Mrs. Bill Carter had a baby boy. Steve Wiman is being given a luncheon Sunday (to celebrate) by the Charlie Bracketts in their charming New England home. Dwight is in England doing war work.

Made Good

Gregory Peck, who's setting our town aflame, got his acting training at Bob Porterfield's Barter theater in Abingdon, Va. Some years ago he was chosen by Dorothy Stickney (who got the award that year for her performance in "Life With Father") as the most promising actor on Broadway. With that award goes a Virginia ham, an acre of land in Abingdon, and the privilege of sending two people with talent to Barter theater. Yes, girls, Peck is married—to a sweet little Finnish girl . . . Our child, Gloria Jean, has grown up and is showing the town to a bunch of R. A. F. fliers from Falcon Field, Ariz. . . . At the preview of "This Is the Army," Charlie Feldman sent a note to Sophie Tucker asking whether she'd play a featured role with George Raft in "Three Cheers for the Boys."

This Is It

"This Is the Army" is the entertainment sock of the century—of any century. There's no phase of show business it doesn't dip into. Picture's so much better than the stage play it's laughable. Who would believe when our boys joined the Army that they'd get a screen test free, and that our producers, after getting one look at 'em, would be fighting like mad to get 'em under contract when the war's ended. Sergt. Earl Oxford is one. He sings the "Stage Door Canteen" song. What a voice! To me Sergt. Ezra Stone should have had more credit than he got. I understand the Army wanted soldiers' credit played down. Joe Louis got the biggest round of applause. Best thing George Murphy's ever done, ditto Rosemary De Camp. Only one small scene that didn't ring true. Soldiers in the audience picked that up instantly—where Joan Leslie practically forces Ronnie Reagan into marrying her when he wants to wait until war's over. Whoever chose Joan's hats must have had a grudge against the girl. These are minor gripes. Someone should really write a ditty entitled, "God Bless Irving Berlin."

U. S.-Mexico Ties Called Trade Example

Future trade relations between the United States and other countries may well be guided by present efforts to expand our economic collaboration with our neighbor south of the Rio Grande, according to Francis H. Love, member of a delegation of the Mexico Pilgrims to Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne Chatfield Taylor, head of the Mexican-American Commission for Economic Cooperation.

The Mexico Pilgrims, a social club of prominent businessmen with present or past connections in Mexico, with headquarters in New York City, yesterday held the first luncheon in the 25-year history of the club in Washington. They met at the Metropolitan Club to hear an informal report of the delegation which met with Taylor.

Members of the delegation, all from New York City, were John A. Zellers, president; Col. James W. Flanagan, honorary president; Fred P. Mattox, vice president; Howard T. Oliver, secretary, and Francis H. Love.

Although no definite plans were evolved, the delegation pledged the cooperation of the Pilgrims to Secretary Taylor's plans for a formal organization of United States-Mexican cooperation in all fields of economic and commercial endeavor as laid down in a recent report of the commission.

The report, one of the results of President Roosevelt's meeting with Gen. Avila Camacho, President of Mexico, in April, recommended a number of specific projects, constituting an "important contribution to Mexico's economy."

Guest of honor at the luncheon was George T. Summerlin, chief, division of protocol, Department of State, and charge d'affaires in Mexico between 1917 and 1924.

$10 Reward For Return Of $13,325

George F. Jackson, a paralyzed Negro janitor, is $10 richer today because he was honest enough to return a brown cloth bag containing $13,325, which he found in an alley one day last week.

The driver of the armored truck from which the small fortune fell, still has a job because Jackson, who makes $20 a week, resisted the temptation to retire for the rest of his life on his fund. It was the grateful driver who sent Jackson the $10.

Mrs. Wilhelmena New, stenographer at the Canteen Company, 1218 Mt. Olivet Road, received a box of candy from the driver because she promptly got in touch with him when Jackson turned the bag over to her.

Jackson, 58, of 1859 Central Place Northeast, has one son who is in the armed services in California. Admitting there was a temptation to keep the money, the janitor considered instead that in the war his part was "to give honest industry."

United Will Start New Plane Service From D.C. Aug. 16

Additional air service into Washington, rapidly developing into the Nation's No. 1 air terminal, will become available August 16, when United Airlines starts direct passenger-mail-express service between the Capital, Toledo and Chicago, Karl P. Hughes, District traffic manager, announced yesterday.

United's entrance into Washington, authorized by the CAB in June, will connect this city "with a system covering 5600 miles of airways reaching directly to 38 cities in 16 States and one Canadian province," according to Harold Crary, vice president.

United will operate two daily round trips and connect the Nation's Capital with Chicago in 4¼ hours and with the West Coast in 20 hours.

Direct air service between Washington and Ottawa is envisaged in an application of American Airlines to the CAB.

Seeking extension of its routes from Syracuse, N. Y.—already connected with this city by air—to Ottawa, A. N. Kemp pointed to the wartime necessity for fast, direct air service between the two capitals, urging an "immediate hearing" before the board.

Man in Street Gives Opinion On Edict for Draft of Fathers

With approximately 50,000 District fathers due to face draft reclassification on October 1, an inquiring reporter sallied into city streets yesterday to get first-hand opinions and reactions from those potentially affected by edict of War Manpower Commission head, Paul V. McNutt.

These were the men interviewed and their reactions:

Gerald Bodily, 205 North Piedmont, Arlington, Va., occupational analyst of McNutt's own department: "I've been prepared for the draft since December last. My thinking has no exalted patriotism. There's a job to do, but I am especially conscious of things that need be done on the home as well as the armed fronts." Bodily, 27, has a son, 3 years old.

Needs of Home Front

H. A. Souders, 29, District policeman, Falls Church, Va., one child, Barbara Jean, 6: "The draft is all right, but we should not lose sight of the fact men are needed for the home front. Challenges at home are as vital, perhaps, as those faced by the armed forces."

J. F. Derner, 27, of Wilmington, Del., purchasing executive, Dravo Ship Building Corp., with invalid 5-month-old daughter: "Married men, if really necessary, should be drafted, provided proper provisions are made for families. I am, of course, sensitive to the condition of my baby."

Arthur Zahn, 31, of 801 Chetworth Place, Alexandria, Va.: "I have no particular reaction and will do nothing about the draft call. If called I will go." Zahn has a son, 4½ years old and is the basketball coach at George Washington University.

Wanting a serviceman's reaction the reporter approached Pvt. Mark Long, attached to Infantry Training Staff, Fort Benning, on leave in Washington.

Woman's Opinion

"If wives have jobs and can make provision for child care, their husbands should go into service. But families should be taken care of."

A woman was to have the last word. She is Mrs. William F. Moss, 1705 K Street Northwest. Her husband is employed as a District fireman and the couple have three minor children.

Said Mrs. Moss: "I think we have a fine Government. If it's necessary to draft fathers to preserve that Government then, by all means, draft fathers. We should all be in if we have to be."

There were other opinions but they all added up the same: If men are needed for all-out war the full manpower of the Nation should respond.

D. C. Navy Man Listed Killed

Lieut. Comdr. Frederick Warren Purdy, U. S. N., whose wife lives at 3407 Lowell Street Northwest, yesterday was reported killed in action in a Navy Department list of 71 casualties, including 3 dead, 52 missing and 16 wounded.

The list also included two men from Virginia and one from Maryland.

Commander Purdy was born in Chicago 31 years ago and attended Severn School at Severna Park, Md., before entering the Naval Academy. From his graduation in 1933 until 1936, he served on the U. S. S. Mississippi. His next assignment was on the staff of the commander of the Battle Force. After one year, he assumed duty on the destroyer Bagley. Mrs. Molly Pagan Purdy, his wife, lives here with her mother and brother, Albert Pagan.

Anthony Corneilious Clupp, jr., of Lonaconing, Md., is reported missing. Also listed as missing is Thomas Stevens of Norfolk, Va., and reported killed in action is Henry Carson Staton of Lynchburg, Va.

This list brings the total of naval casualties to 27,713, including 8831 dead, 9842 missing, 4865 wounded and 4166 prisoners of war.

Treasury Ruling Expected Today On Charwomen

Officials of the Treasury Department today were expected to make known their decision in the case of federally employed charwomen who have asked that further salary deductions to recoup wage overpayments of 13 cents an hour be withheld until Congress meets.

Their request was made Saturday through the United Federal Workers of America, Local No. 11, of which they are members. A committee from the union will call on Treasury officials today and, pending action by the Treasury Department, would not issue a statement.

It was learned, however, if the Treasury refuses to hold up the matter until Congress meets, at which time it will be asked to pass necessary legislation favoring the women, the union will "go higher" in its fight against deductions being withheld. The total sum which was overpaid the women, through no fault of their own, and which the Government seeks to recover, is approximately $5000.

SPARS Given Virginia Honor

First tribute to SPARS in connection with the anniversary of the founding of the Coast Guard, 153 years ago today, was paid when Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr., proclaimed this week Coast Guard week in Virginia.

Governor Darden urged "citizens of the Commonwealth to honor those who go down to the sea in ships, and women who compose their newly organized branch, the SPARS." The President signed legislation creating the women's reserve November 23, 1942.

Members of the Coast Guard, themselves, will do little celebrating. Officials of the service have issued statements the world over, that they will celebrate only by pressing the fight against the enemy in all theaters of war.

Record Personnel

"The days of training are now giving way to the days of combat and service," Vice Admiral R. R. Waesche, commandant, said yesterday. Noting that this anniversary finds the Coast Guard with the largest personnel strength of all time, he said, that nevertheless, "the task ahead . . . will draw upon our every energy."

"But knowing as I do the loyalty, the courage, the teamwork, and will-to-do spirit of the Coast Guard, for which I wish to record my deep appreciation," he said, "the task will be done and done well."

"Our men on ships on the high seas and our men entrusted with the landing of troops on foreign soil, as well as all the men and women of the Coast Guard in less glamorous but equally essential work, are not looking back over the service's honorable history today in any formal anniversary program," Rear Admiral L. T. Chalker, assistant commandant, said yesterday.

"All Looking to Future"

"Rather," he contended, "are they all going ahead with the job before them, looking to the future when aggression shall be crashed and we in the Coast Guard can return to our peacetime job of making life and property safe at sea."

The service's duties, increased by wartime, were outlined yesterday by Rear Admiral Robert Donohue, chief personnel officer, who said the Coast Guard took pride in the honor the country paid it this week.

Now, he said, the Coast Guard is protecting United States seaports from sabotage, just as it has been doing since 1790. It also is scouring the seas for enemy submarines, convoying supplies across the oceans, and landing troops on Axis soil in the Mediterranean," he added.

61 Take Oath As Citizens; 9 in Uniform

Justice David Pine officiated yesterday at the naturalization of 61 persons, including 9 soldiers, in a District Court ceremony.

Justice Pine told the new citizens, who were natives of 21 different countries:

"This is not a perfunctory thing you are doing, but it is a solemn obligation. I want you to think about that daily. Don't shirk the duties citizenship has placed on you. Don't ever fail in your duties."

The Rev. Peter F. Mueller, 28, a Catholic priest, was among those naturalized. He said he had six brothers in Germany, all of whom probably are in the German army. He came here when he was 13, and was educated for the priesthood in American schools. He is professor at St. Edward's University, in Texas.

One man was refused admittance. A former seaman, he had jumped ship in 1924 and entered the ocuntry illegally. In 1938 he left for Canada, later reentering legally.

Those naturalized were:

Helen Dadian, Nina S. Hebholtz, Josephine M. Keller, Charlotte Robinson, Elisabeth L. Franzos, Elisabet C. Economopoulos, Grace Fabrizio, Vasiliki Bacalis, Beatrice M. Albamonte, Elsa Mieses, Frume Eisenberg, Maria Tasiliatelis, Emilia Natoli, Adam Kaufmann, Beatrice Biend, Alfredo Gavazza, Margot B. Eckstein, Peter F. Mueller, Julianna S. Gardiner, Antonina Ettaro, Elaine Heino, Max G. Bresiauer, Carmela Venuto, Cesira Lazzari, Lucia Anselmo, Maria J. Schuler, Anna M. Bischoff, Carmelia Mioni, Frank D. Reeves, Raphael A. Gonzalez, Adele Dei Vecchio, Mary A. Piunketi, Frida K. Meyer, Laurenzia D'Antuono, Amelia Russieri, Theodora Giove, Kurt Levi, Gheorghe Fodor, Mordecai Grossman, Fannie Platt, Anna H. Carlson, Theresa M. Kichler, Anne Dick, John G. Stamoules, Fridolin Rey, Bridget C. Collins, Nestor F. Delevaux, Antje Tuinmann, George H. Palmer, Frank C. Holdsworth, Joseph Schapiro, Inga S. Miller, Tibor K. Kesztheyi, Ralph Larsen, Celedonio G. Laison, Lemonis J. Arzyropais, Paul Chait, Ivan D. Vagin, Giuseppi Micallef and John Nasht.

Union Checks On Venereals Handling Food

Determined to survey thoroughly the venereal disease situation in District eating places as revealed by James D. Hayes, chairman of Draft Board No. 9, in a Post interview, Leighton Williams, business agent of the Cooks and Kitchen Employes Union, yesterday appointed a five-man committee to investigate and report.

"Wherever infected persons are found we will order immediate treatment, if the person is not already being treated," Williams declared. "By this method, if we find aggravated conditions, swift reductions in the number of infected persons will ensue."

The committee appointment followed a statement by Dr. F. G. Gillick, head of the Bureau of Venereal Diseases, that those who cannot afford private treatment will be cared for by the Health Department at public clinics.

The William committee was specifically ordered to check all food handlers in the District and under jurisdication of his union, to determine: (1) How many actually have venereal disease; (2) for what length of time; (3) the infected one's particular task in preparation, handling or serving of foods; (4) how long under treatment and present condition.

Committee findings will be relayed to Dr. Gillick with whom Williams plans conferences for action on the report.

In the face of statements by health authorities that infection cannot be transmitted through food, Williams' step was seen as a move to safeguard those infected through treatment, and thus bolster morale of a "squeamish public."

De Gaulle, Giraud Pledge Unity; U. S. Recognition Sought

Algiers, Aug. 3 (AP).—Gens. Charles de Gaulle and Henri Giraud paid high tribute to each other and pledged themselves to work for the liberation of France in an exchange of letters made public tonight.

Their letters, which followed the agreement unifying the armed forces of France, were accompanied by an order issued by De Gaulle calling upon the Fighting French to accept Giraud as their new military commander in chief.

With this public demonstration of unity, there was a growing impatience at the delay of the United States in recognizing the French provisional government.

An editorial in Derniere Nouvelles of Algiers said the British favored French recognition, "realizing the unfortunate consequences of the present (American) attitude."

The editorial declared that President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull were "risking committing a political and psychological error."

Life in Harlem Back to Normal

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Life in Harlem appeared near normal today after the rioting and vandalism that took five lives, injured 261 and caused the arrest of 504 Sunday night and Monday.

The heavily populated Negro district, however, continued under guard of 4000 police as the merchants reopened their stores and the population came out of their homes. Public Works crews practically completed the boarding up of shop windows shattered during the looting.

C. S. Baker Rites Today To Be Private

Private funeral services for Charles S. Baker, 55, prominent local attorney, will be held today at St. Paul's Church in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Baker, who died in Rochester, N. Y., Tuesday, is survived by his wife, Elizabeth L. Baker; his children, Barbara, Charles Lambert, and Howard Brooks; a sister, Mrs. Jeanette Morrell, and a brother, Warren L. Baker.

Mr. Baker was president of the Barristers and a member of the Board of Trade, University Club, Chevy Chase Club, American Legion, an honorary member of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and the bar association. He was a trustee of the National Savings & Trust Co., George Washington University, the Washington Law Reporter, American Institute for the Advancement of Science and the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

At his death, he headed the firm of Baker, Beedy & Magee with offices in the Munsey Building.

Mr. Baker was born at Columbia, S. Dak., on April 12, 1888. His father was the late Charles A. Baker, a prominent investment banker of Rochester and Washington.

Mr. Baker graduated from Western High School in 1907, received the degree of B. A. from Cornell University in 1911, the degree of M. A. from Columbia University in 1912 and the degree of LL.B. from George Washington University in 1913.

On May 15, 1917, Mr. Baker married Elizabeth Lambert, the daughter of Wilton J. Lambert, one of this city's most famous lawyers.

When this country entered the First World War, Mr. Baker enlisted as a seaman in the Navy. His interest was flying, so he became a Naval pilot at Pensacola, Fla., rising to the rank of lieutenant by the end of the war.

At his death, he held the rank of lieutenant commander.

Funeral services are to be private.

Funeral Friday For J. M. Ray At Silver Spring

James Moody Ray, 62, died yesterday at his home, 611 Thayer Avenue, Silver Spring, after an illness of five weeks.

A resident of Silver Spring for 20 years, Mr. Ray had been employed for the past 12 years with the Terminal Ice Co. Prior to that he was an excavating contractor.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Beatrice Ray, he is survived by seven children: Mrs. Alice Steel, Mrs. Ruth Claggett, Miss Lottie Ray, Eugene Ray, John Ray, all of Silver Spring; Corpl. Clifton Ray, United States Army, stationed at Spokane, Wash., and Sergt. Howard Ray, on duty overseas.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Friday at the Silver Spring Baptist Church. Burial will be in Brookeville Cemetery, Md.

Shortage Denied, But Beer's Where You Can Find It

The local beer situation became more confused last night as first effects of the Army's demands that 15 per cent of national output be devoted to 33.2 brew were felt here. Beer seemed to be where you could find it.

Local brewers and brewers' agents, while denying an actual shortage, admitted beer producion is now from 22 per cent to 40 per cent below normal.

Some places said they were on a "day to day" basis, and that a shortage is here. In other spots, however, chiefly in the more popular restaurants, the beverage seemed plentiful.

Miss Day Buried At Fort Lincoln

Miss Zenobia A. Day, 50, Government worker, who died Wednesday in Emergency Hospital, was buried Saturday in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

A native of Greenville, S. C., Miss Day had been in Federal service 25 years, 20 of them with the Veterans' Administration. Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Jeannie Vernon, of Arlington, Va., and a niece, Miss Adrian Vernon, of Washington.

2 Hospitals Enroll in Nurse Training Plan

Two District hospitals, Freedmen's and Providence, yesterday became the first in the Nation to enroll in Federal Security Agency's plan to add 65,000 women to the Nation's nursing personnel under provisions of the recently passed Bolton Nurse Training Act, creating a United States Cadet Nurse Corps. Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, was the third to join.

The two institutions completed arrangements to interlock their curricula and student body with the Public Health Service at a meeting in Medical Society headquarters with United States Surgeon Gen. Thomas Parran, presiding.

Under the present setup for augmenting the supply of emergency needed nurses, nurse training hospitals throughout the country may apply to the Public Health Service for Federal aid in providing a nurse reserve to relieve trained nurses for emergency duties.

Federal Funds Available

Under the plan Federal funds are made available to schools taking part in the program. The schools in turn will furnish scholarships, fees, books, maintenance, uniforms and monthly allowances for cadet nurses.

First results of the plan as seen by Lucile Petry, director of the division of nurse education, were these: speeding up of nursing education, reducing time for graduation from three years to two years or, at outside, 30 months.

Women 18 to 35 will become uniformed precadets for the first nine months of traniing, will advance to junior cadetships after 15 to 21 months training and thereafter, until graduation, will be senior cadets.

May Enter Military

Upon graduation cadets may elect to enter military service or continue in essential civilian work for the duration.

"Those taking part in this Federal plan must be essentially occupied after graduation," Miss Petry said, adding that this was the only restriction placed upon participants in the program.

Graduate cadets will have the same status under the War Manpower Commission as their sisters in the WAACS, WAVES and SPARS, said Mary E. Switzer, assistant to Paul V. McNutt, WMC director.

Yesterday's meeting brought together health authorities and nursing officials from the District, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina.

The cadet corps is expected to complete preliminary organization by August 31, following meetings in principal cities from coast to coast.

Large Stockpile Of Sugar Fails To Benefit Bakers

Despite the fact that latest available figures on the United States sugar stockpile, those for May, show an increase of 10,522 tons over the amount on hand the corresponding period last year, many bakers in the Washington area are finding it difficult to stay in business because of rationing quotas, according to J. J. Gold, D. C. public relations adviser and officials of the American Bakers Association.

At present, it was said, bakers are receiving about 85 per cent of the amount of sugar used in preration days.

Department of Agriculture figures show that in May, 1942, there was a stockpile of 1,548,000 tons while May, 1943 showed 1,688,522 tons were on hand.

Agriculture Classes May Be Offered

Winchester, Va., Aug. 3.—Vocational agriculture classes may be offered at Sydney Gore High School in Frederick County for the first time in September, Leslie D. Kline, superintendent of schools, said today. Similiar classes are now being conducted at Gainesboro, Stephens and Middletown High Schools.

Kline announced that the 1943 session will open on September 9 and that arrangements have been made to excuse a limited number of older children for orchard and farm work.

Airline Seeks Direct Service, D. C. to Ottawa

Direct air service between Washington and Ottawa, the United States and Canadian capitals, is envisaged in an application of American Airlines to the Civil Aeronautics Board, which yesterday gave new evidence of the growing importance of Washington as an air terminal.

Seeking extension of its routes from Syracuse, N. Y., to Ottawa, A. N. Kemp, president, pointed to wartime necessity for fast, direct air service between the two capitals, urging an "immediate hearing" before the board.

Washington, which is already linked with Syracuse through American Airlines, would also be connected with Montreal through another line, proposed in the application which is in addition to the air service for 35 American cities, applied for by American last month.

African tradesmen are fond of long, drawn-out bargaining and do not favor quick transactions.

AUCTION SALES 8

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1943—
THOS. J. OWEN & SON, AUCTIONEERS.
Southern Building.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE TWELVE-STORY BRICK APARTMENT-HOTEL BUILDING, KNOWN AS "THE DUPONT CIRCLE," LOCATED ON THE WEST SIDE OF CONNECTICUT AVENUE BETWEEN "N" STREET AND DUPONT CIRCLE, NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust from Dupont Circle, Inc., to Roy J. Penn, trustee, to secure payment of a note of Dupont Circle, Inc., dated July 3rd, 1941, payable to the order of Commercial Credit Company, Inc., for Two Hundred Fifty Thousand Dollars ($250,000.00), said deed of trust being duly recorded in Liber 7635, folio 401, et seq., of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned, substituted trustee, in Civil Action No. 19755 in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, will sell at public auction, in front of the premises at the Connecticut Avenue entrance, on THURSDAY, THE 19TH DAY OF AUGUST, 1943, AT FOUR O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situated in the District of Columbia, and designated as and being Lot Thirteen (13) in Edson Bradley's combination of part of square One Hundred Thirty-eight (138), as per plat recorded in Liber No. 43, folio 65, of the land records of the Office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, the premises being also known as "Dupont Circle Hotel" at the intersection of Connecticut Avenue and Dupont Circle in Washington, District of Columbia. Together with all the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in anywise appertaining, including all plumbing, engines, boilers, compressors, automatic stokers, elevators, dynamos, heating and lighting apparatus, sprinkler or fire extinguishing system, heaters, machinery, ventilating or air-conditioning system, and all other fixtures of whatsoever kind or character, and all, each and every of the interior improvements and fixtures, movable or immovable, of every kind or character in and upon said land and premises, as more fully described in said deed of trust. Said sale shall be subject to a prior deed of trust from Dupont Circle, Inc., to National Savings and Trust Company, trustee, to secure payment of a note of Dupont Circle, Inc., dated July 3rd, 1941, payable to the order of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, for One Million Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($1,250,000.00), the amount of the unpaid balance due thereon at the time of the first publication of this notice is One Million One Hundred Eighty-two Thousand Nine Hundred Sixteen Dollars and Sixty-three Cents ($1,182,916.63) plus accrued interest from July 1, 1943, and the amount of the unpaid balance due thereon on the date of the sale will be announced at the sale according to the best information then obtainable by the undersigned, said prior deed of trust containing, among others, provisions for periodic amortization of principal and for interest payments both monthly and quarterly, all as more particularly set forth in said deed of trust to which reference is hereby made for the terms thereof, the same having been recorded in Liber 7635, folio 317, et seq., of the land records of the District of Columbia. Said sale shall also be subject to a lease of the entire property executed by Dupont Circle, Inc., to the United States of America as of July 1, 1941, for a term of one year, with a renewal term of four years, at an annual rental of Two Hundred Nine Thousand and 04/100 ($209,000.04) Dollars per year, payable in monthly installments, but under which, by reason of the non-occupancy by the United States of America of a portion of the property, the monthly rental installments being currently paid by the United States of America are Fifteen Thousand Thirty-eight Dollars ($15,038.00). For the terms of said lease, reference is hereby made to a photostatic copy thereof on file with the real estate department of the undersigned, substituted trustee, at its main office in Washington, D. C., where said photostatic copy may be examined by those interested. Said sale shall also be subject to any other rights of tenancy in said property which, by operation of law, shall survive this sale. The undersigned, substituted trustee, is informed that in addition to the United States of America, the following listed persons or corporations are presently occupants of rooms or spaces in the said property: Tenants—I. Herman, Liberty Laundry, Inc. (Yale Laundry), Frank P. Fenwick and Josephine F. Fenwick, Arthur Seagren, Joe Paiano, Southern Florist, Inc. (Dupont Circle Florists), William A. Heiphenstine, Bachrach, Inc.: All America Cable & Radio, Inc.: Sarkis, Moses & Louis Manoukian, trading as "Manoukian Bros.," v. Velia Parma (his heirs). The undersigned, substituted trustee, is informed that the minimum aggregate monthly rental being currently paid by said tenants, other than the United States of America, is approximately Two Thousand Nine Hundred Forty Dollars ($2,940.00). The undersigned, substituted trustee, is informed that the terms and conditions of tenancy of the occupants of rooms and spaces in said property is set forth in original leases and copies of leases between Dupont Circle, Inc., and said tenants to which reference is hereby made for the terms thereof, and which are on file with the real estate department of the undersigned, substituted trustee, at its main office in Washington, D. C., where they may be examined by those interested. Undersigned, substituted trustee, is informed that all rentals accruing under the aforementioned lease to the United States of America and rentals due from the above listed tenants have been assigned by Dupont Circle, Inc., to Commercial Credit Company, Inc., as additional security for the payment of the aforesaid note of Dupont Circle, Inc., dated July 3, 1941, payable to the order of Commercial Credit Company, Inc., for Two Hundred Fifty Thousand Dollars ($250,000.00), and have also been assigned to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company as additional security for the payment of the aforesaid note of Dupont Circle, Inc., dated July 3, 1941, payable to the order of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for One Million Two Hundred Fifty Thousand Dollars ($1,250,000.00).

TERMS OF SALE: The undersigned, substituted trustee, will receive no bid from anyone offering to bid who shall not at or before the hour of sale, or any adjournment thereof, deposit with said trustee, as a pledge that such bidder will make good his bid in case of its acceptance, a deposit of $20,000, either in cash or certified check on a local bank or trust company, made or indorsed payable to the undersigned, substituted trustee. The deposit of any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him immediately after the sale. The sale shall be for cash and the successful bid price (for the equity of Dupont Circle, Inc., over and above the unpaid balance of said prior deed of trust to National Savings and Trust Company, trustee) must be paid, in full, in cash or certified check within thirty (30) days from the day of sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., at the cost of purchaser. All adjustments of taxes, rents, etc., to be made as of date of settlement. Settlement to be made within thirty (30) days from date of sale, otherwise the undersigned, substituted trustee, reserves the right to forfeit the deposit or to resell the property at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser upon the foregoing terms, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or with or without forfeiting the deposit the undersigned, substituted trustee, may avail itself of any legal or equitable rights against the defaulting purchaser.

AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, Substituted Trustee. In Civil Action No. 19755 in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia. By WILLIAM L. BEALE, Vice President, 15th Street and Pennsylvania Ave. N.W., Washington, D. C. Attest: A. H. SHILLINGTON, Assistant Secretary.

MEN TO LEARN
AUTO MECHANICS
It's essential work, it's interesting, it pays well. And, as an automobile mechanic, you're in a field of work that's sure to be busier than ever, after the war.
EARN WHILE LEARNING
Your pay starts the day you report—increases as rapidly as you become more skillful.
Our Oldsmobile factory-planned training prepares you for the best-paying jobs in this well-paid field. It includes full instruction on Hydra-Matic Drive, the type of drive that will almost surely be standard equipment on many postwar cars. It lets you specialize, if you choose, on engine tune-up, engine overhaul, electrical service, wheel alignment and brakes, body and sheet metal work, or general chassis repairing.
If you are mechanically inclined, we'll teach you how to make your skill most valuable to yourself as well as to your country at this time when auto mechanics are so essential. Only those eligible under the War Manpower Economic Stabilization Plan need apply.

Railway Employes To Ask Strike Vote

Unions Will Take Step to Get Review Of Demands for General Wage Increase

The 15 unions representing more than one million nonoperating railroad employes have decided tentatively to invoke the strike vote provisions of the Railway Labor Act as a means of securing a reconsideration of their demands for a 20-cent-an-hour general wage increase, it was learned yesterday.

Officials of the unions will meet in Washington starting today, with present plans calling for the authorization of a strike ballot of railroad employes.

Under the Railway Labor Act, securing of an affirmative strike vote would immediately invoke a 30-day "cooling off" period, during which the Government would attempt to settle the dispute before the unions would be legally authorized to strike.

President Intercedes

President Roosevelt had set up by executive order an alternative procedure which by-passed the strike-vote provisions of the act for the duration of the war. Under this alternative procedure, a special presidential emergency board was organized to hear the railroad workers' wage demands. The board recommended a general increase of 8 cents an hour, but Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson set the increase aside on grounds that it did not conform with the stabilization program.

Vinson suggested that the board consider instead the possibility of granting an increase to lower bracket workers on the ground of substandard living conditions, but the board refused to act further on the ground that it passed out of existence when it rendered its original decision.

Since then, union officials have been negotiating with Vinson, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes and with railroad operators, but to little avail. It is expected, however, that discussions looking toward some possible settlement may be resumed this week.

It is believed that action to authorize a strike ballot at this time would be a potent bargaining weapon in the hands of the unions. If the threat to strike were followed by an actual strike call, it seems apparent that Government action seizing the country's railroads would follow.

Once taken, the strike vote action could result in the appointment of another panel to make a second decision in the case.

Note Spurs Mrs. Gill's Death Inquiry

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 3.—Authorities today had in their possession a six-page letter purportedly written to an Army lieutenant by oil heiress Janet Snowden Gill, 29, a short time before she plunged 12 stories to her death from a hotel suite June 1.

Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet said it was mailed by Mrs. Gill somewhere in Minnesota while she was en route from her Santa Barbara, Calif., home to meet her husband, Capt. William Sherman Gill, of Army Intelligence.

Grumet did not reveal the lieutenant's name. He said Mrs. Gill's family gave him the letter when it was returned unclaimed.

The letter ended, Grumet said, with the inscription, "All my love forever and ever," and was signed "Jan."

Grumet also stated that on the night of Mrs. Gill's death she met her husband in the hotel suite to discuss divorce plans. Captain Gill retired convinced that his wife had changed her mind and a reconciliation had been effected, Grumet said.

Mrs. Gill's body was found on a hotel set-back shortly afterwards. It was removed from a receiving vault at Ferncliff Cemetery, Ardsley, N. Y., last week and an autopsy performed. A complete autopsy report is expected in a few days, Grumet said, adding that members of Mrs. Gill's family had asked for an investigation into her death.

Lloyd George Has Cold

London, Aug. 3 (AP).—David Lloyd George, 80-year-old former Premier of Britain, suffered from a cold today and was confined to his home by order of his physician.

Coast Guard Finds Body of Ferry Passenger

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 3 (AP).—The body of Evelyn Scott Calloway, 18, Navy Yard employe, who was said to have leaped into the Elizabeth River Sunday morning from a Norfolk-Portsmouth ferryboat, has been recovered.

The Coast Guard took the body from the river about 9 o'clock last night near the spot where she disappeared.

Hazel Richardson of Portsmouth, a friend of the dead girl, identified the body. Detective Leon Nowitzky, investigator for Dr. C. D. J. MacDonald, city coroner, said the coroner had ruled that no inquest would be necessary.

Another girl, also 18, a companion of Mrs. Calloway, was prevented from following her friend into the river by another ferry passenger who pulled her from a window through which she attempted to jump.

Both girls, married to servicemen, came to Portsmouth from Radford about a month ago. They had been employed at the Norfolk Navy Yard as messengers.
